COMPANY "K" 3RD ARKANSAS CAVALRY CSA IN CIVIL WAR YELL COUNTY MEN LISTED

It was May 1861 when the call for volunteers went out to support the cause of Confederate States. Several regiments were formed and dispatched to various fronts. Numerical designation of several units were duplicated, as almost everybody wanted to be first. From Pope, Conway, Perry and Yell Counties, Colonel John Williamson had gathered four companies and on 10 June 1861, were camped on Arsenal Grounds, in Little Rock. On this date eight companies had been mustered. Strategy demanded that troops be sent to northeast Arkansas immediately. Late June found these companies on Current River near Pocahontas. On 29 June 1861 these eight companies were officially mustered into the Confederacy as the First Arkansas Mounted Volunteers.

The Conscription Act, ordered re-organization and election of officers to be effective 25 May 1862. All troops were re-mustered and elections held. In addition Colonel Williamson's battalion was amalgamated with the 3rd Arkansas Cavalry as Troop "E", "I" and "K", the latter being from Yell County. Officially they were now in Gen. C. W. Pfeifer's brigade, together with the 6th and 9th Texas Cavalry and Col. Ras Stirman's Battalion of Sharpshooters from Arkansas.

In early December 1862 our Arkansans were gathered with other scattered regiments and a lightning raid was planned on Holly Springs, where Grant had built a supply depot necessary to keep his army in the field.

Re-organization occurred 10 April 1863 and they were now in Joseph Wheelers Cavalry Brigade. By 23 April they started toward Decateur, Alabama, fighting continuesly from 29 April 1863, near Russellville, Alabama, they maneuvered to near Cedar Bluff, Georgia, by 4 May 1863.

Near Athens, Tennessee Joseph Wheeler again assumed command late in September 1863. His organization now consisted of his and Forrest's Divisions. The 3rd Arkansas was directly under Brig. Gen. William T. Martin's Division, Russell's Brigade of mostly Alabamans. The only consolidation was they were now with Capt. J. H. Wiggins Battery of Horse Artillery from Arkansas.

William H. Blackwell, a well known physician from Chickalah Village, was promoted to Major, while at Courtland. Here they spent eleven days, moving out on 20 October 1863. By 31st October they were on the old battlefield of Chickamauga. Here Wheeler reorganized his command. The 3rd Arkansas Cavalry was now consolidated into Harrisons Brigade of the 8th and 11th Texas Cavalry.

March 19, 1865 was the last charge this gallant regiment made, when they heard of General Johnson's surrender, many of the men simply walked away. When the regiment surrendered 25 April 1865, Major Blackwell signed the surrender payroll. Several of the enlisted men had been captured elsewhere. Some were with General Wheeler, who was attempting to reach Mexico, while others were captured at Athens, Georgia.

Those choosing to remain with Company "K", 3rd Arkansas Cavalry and be legally paroled were: Capt. Henry W. Carden, Pvt. J. M. Barnett, Pvt. L. D. Bata, Pvt. Jasper N. Cowger, Sgt. J. O. Nicholson, Pvt. Andy Parks, Sgt. Robert Turner, Pvt. Joseph B. York. Capturd at Athens: Pvt. J. T. Brumley; released from prison: Pvt. W. H. GENERAL JO SHELBY'S ACCOUNT OF THE CAPTURE OF DARDANELLE, DECEMBER 1864

On May 5th, 1864, immediately after the battle of Jenkin's Ferry, I received orders to march to the rear of General Steele's army, occupy the valley of the White River, and prevent its navation and the use of the Little Rock and DeVall's Bluff railroad in every possible manner and fashion.

Delay in getting ammunition and transportation prevented me from moving until the 9th, when, after an unusually hard day's march, I encamped in Rockport, and thence on by heavy traveling to the Arkansas River. My horses were very much reduced by the unusually vigorous campaign preceding my departure, and being mostly unshod, suffered much from the rough and rugged country passed over. Although my command had contributed largely to the capture of several hundred wagons at Mary's Mills, yet the tender consciences of worthy quartermasters in and around Camden were so horribly shocked when my requisition was to be filled that skelton mules and wheezy and ramshackle wagons were all that could be furnished me. Some of these died on the mountains of Fourche La Fave, and one-third of the crazy vehicles never reached the Arkansas River.

On the Fourche La Fave River a notorious nest of jayhawkers, boomers, and deserters were surprised, routed, 23 killed, 2 wounded, and 2 captured, who were shot the next day. I reached the river on the 13th and found it very high and wide. I had brought with me one flat boat and finding one there, I concluded to cross. This was three miles below Lewisburg, garrisoned by 400 Federals, and I hid my command as closely as possible, with vedettes and foot guards around the entire camp and waited for the coming of night. The enemy would not let me rest quietly. A large scout party pushed in my pickets on the Lewisburg road and seemed to be determined to push into my very camp. I did not want to fight them then, for I knew by crossing the river unawares I could capture garrison, supplies, and all, and if they found out my purpose I should have trouble in gelling over; therefore, only resisting hard enough to keep them off, I succeeded in keeping up the impression that only a large force of guerrillas were in the neighborhood; but they paid for their temerity by one lieutenant and thirty-five men killed and wounded, without loss on my part.

When night came I moved my command down to the river; called for 100 volunteer swimmers, who came with great eagerness, and filling one boat with picked riflemen, sent them, under command of Col. Benjaman Elliott, on a voyage of discovery. Right opposite where I proposed crossing was a large bar, opposite the bar an island, and between the island and the mainland a deep stream filled with quicksand. All these facts I did not know, and when Col. Elliot had reported and the swimmers had returned with long faces, I destroyed the boats, struck back squarely from the river and made a wide detour for Dardanelle, knowing it was a much better and safer crossing.

On the 15th my advance guard charged a scouting party of boomers on a general foray, killed twenty; none wounded or captured.

All went well until about 12 o'clock in the night, when my extreme vedettes ran into the advance of a Federal force. Both parties fired sharply for several minutes, when the enemy fled toward Dardanelle. I knew that all hopes of surprise were over, and I determined to charge directly into the place, dark as it was. I galloped straight into the town and found it evacuated by all but one hundred of the garrison, who made no resistance. Many supplies were taken, and the Federals in their frantic efforts to escape overloaded a frail flat-boat, and many of them were lost in the swollen river, their cries ringing wildly out in the night air for help and succor. Making instant preparations to cross, two large and commodious boats were obtained, and the crossing commenced immediately.

By the evening of the 18th, everything was safely over and I encamped at Norristown. The next morning my pickets were fired into briskly, but upon throwing out reenforcements the enemy were soon driven away, it being only a party sent up from Lewisburg to watch operations. Hearing of the capture of Dardanelle and the subsequent crossing of the river, the garrison retreating to Little Rock, leaving everything behind them. I sent a scout into the town, but the small pox was raging there so malignantly that nothing was taken, although my command greatly needed supplies.

Lieutenant Bobb, of the 4th Arkansas, who was a prisoner while Shelby was at Dardanelle, reported the command as follows: " The artillery battery consists of 10-pounder, Parrott guns, and there are about 2,500 men, remarkably well mounted."

At the close of the Civil War in Arkansas, the price of Coffee stood at $18.00 a pound!

1861-65, THE WAR AT HOME

Although the history books do not record any major battles that were fought on Yell County soil during the Civil War, those who lived here were not spared the devastation of the war. The horror of this conflict took a heavy toll on the people and property of the county.

It is preferable to describe the distressed conditions that existed during these years in the words of eyewitnesses, rather than attempt to capture the epoch in retrospect.

E. E. Collier from "near Dardanelle" described the Southern women's journeys to the mill. "Before the Federals occupied this country, I had accumulated a large amount of corn and wheat. To show the condition the country was in, I can truthfully say that for over two years I never saw a man come to the mill except armed squads of scouts, and not customers. Our customers were women altogether".

" I have seen as many as 46 women at the mill at one time waiting their turns. Some came as far as 35 or 40 miles. Two women would get two wagon wheels, sometimes one would belong to the front and the other to the hind part of the wagon."

"Then they would yoke up two yearling steers and put a line on each one. One woman on the right side and the other on the left to hold the cattle in the road, and drive to the mill and back again with their load. Often they came without any grain but none ever went away without breadstuff. Again some would bring two or three yards of homemade cotton cloth to pay for their meal or flour. The price was a dollar a yard.

"Those who came a long distance and had to stay all night were always taken to our house. Women came in bunches from Dover in Pope County and crossed the Arkansas River; from Lanes Bottom; from Johnson County and from Scott County. A party of 13 women came once from Scott County, some 50 miles or more on foot and each one got all she could carry on her back."

Mrs. L. C. Hall of Dardanelle wrote this account of the terror that griped the area during these tragic years."Situated between two armies and being frequently overrun by the raiding and scouting parties of each, Yell County suffered much from the horrors of war; but worse than either Federal or Confederate troops, were the depredations and atrocities of bands of marauders belonging to neither side, known as bushwhackers or jawhawkers, who preyed impartially on secessionist and unionist alike.

"From Mrs. Hart, an aged lady, and her daughter Mrs. McCray and Miss Lizzie Hart, I heard many incidents of these perilous times, in which they were active. All men able to bear arms were in the field, only the aged and inform, and the very young boys being left at home as protectors. Many of these were murdered in cold blood by the bushwhackers and at times it was necessary to preserve their lives, or that they hide from these lawless bands, whose watchword seemed to be 'Kill! Kill! Kill!' and whose lust for blood seemed well night insatiable.

"During one of these seasons of special peril, a young man named Underwood, belonging to Capt. Hollswell's command, was fatally wounded by Jake Graves, a bushwhacker. Under cover of night, he was carried on a stretcher several miles to the banks of Harris Creek, at a point near the Hart home, where he was placed in a tent, concealed by the heavy woods and undergrowth. Here he was nursed, night and day, by six heroic girls, two at a time, for several days until death relieved him of his sufferings.

"His grave was made on the spot where he died, and he was buried by three old men, Toomer, Harrington and Pendergrass. They dared not mark his grave but concealed it as well as they could, being assisted by these six young heroines, his faithful nurses, Mrs. McCray, then Miss Anne Hart, her sister, Miss Lally, afterwards Mrs. Leonard Cotton, Miss Pendergrass, later Mrs. Berry, Misses Harrington and Hoovis, and Miss Ferguson of Pope County.

"The Hart home was known as Confederate headquarters, and one dark night, word was received that the Federals were coming. There being no other way to warn the small Confederate command of their approach, Miss Lally Hart, a young girl of 17, rode through the midnight woods, three or four miles to give the alarm.

"Mrs. Hart told of her many experiences, some humorous, as when she rode horse-back many perilous miles, with the fear of death in her heart, to carry relief, in the shape of a sack of meal, to a starving family.

"On one occasion, she accompanied the ox wagon, driven by one of her faithful Negroes, 10 or 12 miles with a load of corn and wheat to be ground at Wood's Mill. Part of the load of corn and wheat belonged to neighbors, and she hoped by her presence to protect it from thieves.

"The wheat had been ground and sacked, and was in the upper story of the mill. While the corn was being groung, the Federals rode up to the mill, and immediately confiscated the meal. In vain the lady pleaded for at least a portion of it, to take back to her neighbors who had confided the corn to her care. Not one peck would they allow her, so off they went with the entire amount, including the miller's toll, but they didn't know a thing about the flour upstairs, and you may be sure I didn't tell them.'"

CONFEDERATE WOMEN OF ARKANSAS IN THE CIVIL WAR 1861-1865 MEMORIAL REMINISCENCES

SOUTHERN WOMEN WALKING FIFTY MILES TO MILL AND CARRYING SACKS OF MEAL BACK HOME

by E. E. Collier, near Dardanelle

Before the Federals occupied this country, I had accumulated a large amunt of corn and wheat. To show the condition the country was in, I can truthfully say that for over two years I never saw a man come to the mill except armed squads of scouts, and not customers. Our customers were women altogether. I have seen as many as forty-six women at the mill at one time waiting their turns. Some came as far as thirty-five and forty miles. One woman on the right side and the other on the left to hold the cattle in the road, and drive to mill and back again with their load. Often they came without any grain but none ever went away without breadstuff. Again some would bring two or maybe three yards of home made cotton cloth to pay for their meal or flour. The price was a dollar a yard. Those who came a long distance and had to stay all night were always taken to our house. Women came in bunches from Dover in Pope County and crossed the Arkansas River; from Lanes Bottom; from Johnson County and from Scott County. A party of thirteen women came once from Scott County, some fifty miles or more on foot and each one got all she could carry on her back. Many women once in good circumstances were reduced to this extremity.

BLOODY WORK OF BUSHWHACKERS IN YELL COUNTY AND NEAR POCAHONTAS

by Mrs. L. C. Hall, of Dardanelle

Situated between two armies and being frequently overrun by the raiding and scouting parties of each, Yell County suffered much from the horrors of war; but worse than either Federal or Confederate troops, were the depredations and atrocities of bands of marauders belonging to neither side, known as bushwhackers or jawhawkers, who preyed impartially on secessionist and unionist alike.

From Mrs. Hart, an aged lady now well on between eighty and ninety years of age, and her daughter, Mrs. McCray and Miss Lizzie Hart, I heard many incidents of those perilous times, in which they were active. All men able to bear arms were in the field, only the aged and infirm, and the very young boys being left at home as protectors. Many of these were murdered in cold blood by the bushwhackers and at times it was necessary to preserve their lives, or that they hide from these lawless bands, whose watchword seemed to be "Kill! Kill! Kill!" and whose lust for blood seemed well nigh insatiable.

During one of these seasons of special peril, a young man named Underwood, belonging to Capt. Hollswell's command, was fatally wounded by Jake Graves, a bushwhacker. Under cover of night, he was carried on a stretcher several miles to the banks of Harris Creek, at a point near the Hart home, where he was placed in a tent, concealed by the heavy woods and undergrowth. Here he was nursed, night and day, by six heroine girls, two at a time, for several days until death relieved him of his sufferings. His grave was made on the spot where he died, and he was buried by three old men, Messrs. Toomer, Harrington, and Pendergrass. They dared not mark his grave, but concealed it as well as they could, being assisted by these six young heroines, his faithful nurses, Mrs. McCray, then Miss Annie Hart, her sister, Miss Lally, afterwards Mrs. Leonard Cotton, Miss Pendergrass, now Mrs. Berry, Misses Harrington and Hoovis, and Miss Ferguson of Pope County; whether or not these three last are living, or whether married or single I know not.

The Hart home was known as Confederate headquarters, and one dark night, word was received that the Federals were coming. There being no other way to warn the small Confederate command of their approach, Miss Lally Hart, a young girl of seventeen, rode through the midnight woods, three or four miles, alone, to give the alarm.

HUNDREDS WITNESS THE IMPRESSIVE CEREMONY OF U.D.C. UNVEILING

The unveiling of the magnificent statute by Joe Wheeler Chapter U.D.C. in honor of and sacred to the memory of the deceased Confederate Soldiers of Yell County was a most impressive event and one that will never be forgotten by those in attendance, from the oldest white-haired, tottering old veteran who marched in the parade to the youngest of the sweet little flower girls who bedecked the base of the handsome memorial with flowers.

The first part of the program was carried out in the First Presbyterian Church, where 33 of the gallant old heroes who offered their lives on the altar of the Southland in the bloody years of 1861-65 occupied seats of honor.

The program carried out at the church was one of rare beauty, eloquence and interest, the superb address of Col. M. L. Davis featuring the occasion and being listened to with wrapt attention by each member of the vast audience that filled the commodiuos edifice. Following is the program rendered:

Invocation ..... Rev. T. T. Thompson
Violin ..... Mrs. C. E. Hall
Address ..... Col. M. L. Davis
Vocal Solo ..... Mrs. S. G. Catlett
Address ..... Rev. Jas. I. Paisley
Vocal Solo ..... Mrs. Edgar Holiman
Violin-Piano ..... Mesdames C. E. Hall and A. S. McCray
Benediction ..... Rev. H. H. Griffin

The line of march was south on Second Street from the Presbyterian Church to Locust Street, then east to Front, where on the street end between the Dardanelle and Farmers Banks the beautiful statute had been erected, and where a temporary speakers' stand had been built.

The Doxology was sung as the veil was withdrawn from the handsome statute by Mesdames L. C. Hall and G. L. Wirt, charter members of Joe Wheeler Chapter, U.D.C.

Then Mrs. P. G. Blevins, on behalf of the local Chapter, delivered the presentation speech, entrusting the memorial to the care and keeping of Yell County and the City of Dardanelle, to which County Judge T. E. Wilson and Mayor Reece Batson feelingly responded.

Mrs. W. A. Daniels then gave a very appropriate and cleverly rendered reading, after which the dainty little flower girls deposited the burden of fragant blossoms at the base of the shaft. At the conclusion of the above program the parade formed under command of Capt. Ben L. Wirt as Marshall of the day. First came 13 little girls bearing baskets of flowers and wearing shoulder sashes inscribed with the names of the 13 seceding Confederate States. Then followed the old Confederate Veterans - 33 or them under command of Capt. J. W. Blevins. Next came the visiting members of the Russellville Chapter U.D.C., followed by the members of Joe Wheeler Chapter, U.D.C., and then a large concourse of citizens.

Following dinner, a business session of McIntosh Camp No. 531 was held, the meeting being called to order by Capt. J. W. Blevins, and the following proceedings had: Attending veterans registered and annual dues of 15 cents each were paid. The election of Camp officers was then held, resulting as follows: J. W. OUR DEFENDERS

It would be impossible to present a list of loyal mem from this county who have actively defended, the country. No organization from here took part in the war of 1846, however, several were volunteers.

Col. Ras Stirman who at one time called Dardanelle, as did Col. William M. Brooks, commanded cavalry units and drew a part of their men from this vicinity. Col. Georle L. Lemoyne raised and commanded the 17th Arkansas Infantry, when it went away in July 1861 from Dardanelle. This county furnished four complete companies for this latter unit.

Presented here are the rolls of two of the better known units. None of these men were conscripted into service but volunteered and fought with distinction and honor.

CONFEDERATE WOMEN OF ARKANSAS IN THE CIVIL WAR 1861-1865 MEMORIAL REMINISCENCES

SOUTHERN WOMEN WALKING FIFTY MILES TO MILL AND CARRYING SACKS OF MEAL BACK HOME

by E. E. Collier, near Dardanelle

Before the Federals occupied this country, I had accumulated a large amunt of corn and wheat. To show the condition the country was in, I can truthfully say that for over two years I never saw a man come to the mill except armed squads of scouts, and not customers. Our customers were women altogether. I have seen as many as forty-six women at the mill at one time waiting their turns. Some came as far as thirty-five and forty miles. Two women would get two wagon wheels, sometimes one would belong to the front and the other to the hind part of the wagon. Then they would yoke up two yearling steers, and put a line on each one. One woman on the right side and the other on the left to hold the cattle in the road, and drive to mill and back again with their load. Often they came without any grain but none ever went away without breadstuff. Again some would bring two or maybe three yards of home made cotton cloth to pay for their meal or flour. The price was a dollar a yard. Those who came a long distance and had to stay all night were always taken to our house. Women came in bunches from Dover in Pope County and crossed the Arkansas River; from Lanes Bottom; from Johnson County and from Scott County. A party of thirteen women came once from Scott County, some fifty miles or more on foot and each one got all she could carry on her back. Many women once in good circumstances were reduced to this extremity.

BLOODY WORK OF BUSHWHACKERS IN YELL COUNTY AND NEAR POCAHONTAS

by Mrs. L. C. Hall, of Dardanelle

Situated between two armies and being frequently overrun by the raiding and scouting parties of each, Yell County suffered much from the horrors of war; but worse than either Federal or Confederate troops, were the depredations and atrocities of bands of marauders belonging to neither side, known as bushwhackers or jawhawkers, who preyed impartially on secessionist and unionist alike.

From Mrs. Hart, an aged lady now well on between eighty and ninety years of age, and her daughter, Mrs. McCray and Miss Lizzie Hart, I heard many incidents of those perilous times, in which they were active. All men able to bear arms were in the field, only the aged and infirm, and the very young boys being left at home as protectors. Many of these were murdered in cold blood by the bushwhackers and at times it was necessary to preserve their lives, or that they hide from these lawless bands, whose watchword seemed to be "Kill! Kill! Kill!" and whose lust for blood seemed well nigh insatiable.

During one of these seasons of special peril, a young man named Underwood, belonging to Capt. Hollswell's command, was fatally wounded by Jake Graves, a bushwhacker. Under cover of night, he was carried on a stretcher several miles to the banks of Harris Creek, at a point near the Hart home, where he was placed in a tent, concealed by the heavy woods and undergrowth. Here he was nursed, night and day, by six heroine girls, two at a time, for several days until death relieved him of his sufferings. His grave was made on the spot where he died, and he was buried by three old men, Messrs. Toomer, Harrington, and Pendergrass. They dared not mark his grave, but concealed it as well as they could, being assisted by these six young heroines, his faithful nurses, Mrs. McCray, then Miss Annie Hart, her sister, Miss Lally, afterwards Mrs. Leonard Cotton, Miss Pendergrass, now Mrs. Berry, Misses Harrington and Hoovis, and Miss Ferguson of Pope County; whether or not these three last are living, or whether married or single I know not.

The Hart home was known as Confederate headquarters, and one dark night, word was received that the Federals were coming. There being no other way to warn the small Confederate command of their approach, Miss Lally Hart, a young girl of seventeen, rode through the midnight woods, three or four miles, alone, to give the alarm.

Mrs, Hart, whose mind is wonderfully clear and alert, told of her many experiences, some humorous, as when she became a sort of peripatetic postoffice, using her hose, already fulfilling their lawful function as mailbags, many otherwise, as when she rode horse-back many perilous miles, with the fear of death in her heart, to carry relief, in the shape of a sack of meal, to a starving family. On one occasion, she accompanied the ox wagon, driven by one of her faithful negroes, ten or twelve miles with a load of corn and wheat to be ground at Wood's mill. Part of the load belonged to neighbors, and she hoped by her presence to protect it from thieves. The wheat had been ground and sacked, and was in the upper story of the mill. While the corn was being ground, the Federals rode up to the mill, and immediately confiscated the meal. In vain the lady pleaded for at least a portion of it, to take back to her neighbors who had confided the corn to her care. Not one peck would they allow her. So off they went with the entire amount, including the miller's toll, "but," she added, with a little chuckle of satisfaction, in telling me of it, a few days ago, "they didn't know a thing about the flour upstairs, and you may be sure I didn't tell them."

In an old scrap book belonging to Mrs. Dora Shinn, nee Lemoyne, I find the following taken from "The Pocahontas Herald:" "Miss Williams, a daughter of Isaac Williams, living in Black River swamp, about seven miles from this place, heard the report that troops were approaching this place on Sunday evening. Her father was not at home, but she immediately caught a horse, and was soon off in search of him.

"She found him at a neighbor's and told him to hurry on home and get his gun, and come here to help drive back the enemy. She then returned home, got down her father's rifle, moulded all his lead into bullets, took the gun, powder and bullets, and hid them under the house, again mounted the horse, and rode to several houses and spread the alarm, returning home in time to give the old man his gun and ammunition and started him with a crowd of ten men she had collected for the scene of action. All this she did in less than two hours. Such acts of heroism should not be passed by without notice."

This same scrap book has this comment on the weather: "The weather is as cold as a Yankee's heart, and as disagreeable as his company; as blustering as he is before a battle, and as dismal as he is after one."

There are many newspaper accounts of battles, with private letters from soldiers, on the same subjects which the papers were permitted to print. There was also the speech of Miss Lucy Lorraine Adams, presenting a flag to the Moro Greys, Calhoun County, and of Miss Elizabeth Higginbotham, presenting a flag to the Jackson Minute Men.

In October, 1923 a National Guard unit identified as Company F, 153rd Infantry, was organized at Dardanelle. Its service has been continuous and honorable. It was mobilized 23 December 1941 for World War II service, and spent many lonely months on duty in the Alaskan frontier. This same unit was reorganized 25 October 1946, and has continued to serve as a part of the 39th Infantry Division. On 24 September 1957, the unit was called to active duty to help protect nine negros desiring to enter Little Rock High School. FACTUAL HISTORY

Company "F," 153rd Infantry, Arkansas National Guard, was organized April 28, 1923, with three officers and sixty enlisted men. Officers of the new Company were Capt. Morris R. Moore; First Lieut. Theodore H. Cox and Second Lieut. Mark Flater.

The Company's first Armory was the lower floor of the Masonic Lodge building. In 1925 the Company was moved to another temporary Armory, where it remained until the construction of a W.P.A. Armory, sponsored by the state and the citizens of Dardanelle.

Lieutenant Flater moved from the city and was succeeded by Second Lieut. Fred A. Smith. Lieut. Murrell L. Eikleberry served the Company eight years as an officer. Sgt. Elbert F. Foster's promotion to Second Lieutenant was the last change in officer personnel.

Company "F" has made fifteen encampments at Camp Pike, and one at Fort Riley, Kansas, in 1937. In 1930 the Company was called out to Ola where a severe storm and tornado had destroyed and damaged property, and in the same year was called out for riot duty at Lonoke. In 1936 Company "F" won the Colonel McAlister Trophy for efficiency and the Col. Hill Carruth Trophy for rifle marksmanship.

This Company has made an "Excellent" rating on every ordnance inspection for the past four years and on one occasion led the Regiment on the annual Federal Armory inspection. In rifle marksmanship Company "F" has qualified as many as the best Companies of the Regiment, lagging behind only one Company in the percentage of men qualified.

Company F, 153RD INFANTRY HEADQUARTERS

DARDANELLE AMORY

This was the first Armory for the Dardanelle Unit. Their first headquarters was the lower floor of the Masonic Lodge. In 1925 they moved to the building that would later house the Warren McGuire Grocery. In 1936 this building was built by the W.P.A.. It has served the community well. For many years it was use as a Gymnasium and other Physical Education Activities for Dardanelle Schools.

COMPANY F, 153RD INFANTRY

Many Dardanelle area men were members of this unit, which was mobilized December 23, 1940. They were the first troops stationed west of Dutch Harbor, Alaska. They served in the Aleutian Islands for 27 months during World War II, sometimes referred to as "the forgotten war."

As these men were leaving Dardanelle to go to Camp Joseph T. Robinson for a year's intensive military training, the business houses of the city were closed to pay their tribute of affection and devotion to our gallant soldier boys.

At the Armory an improvised speaker's stand, with public address system, had been erected for the occation in the north end of the mammoth armory building, and seats arranded immediately in front thereof. Back of the section of seats, the men of Co. "F" stood "at ease", while hundreds of citizens flanked the rear and side walls.

Mayor Reese Batson made the opening talk and presided throughout the program. An inspiring talk was made by former Senator F. D. Majors, and a brief talk by George F. Upton, after which the principal address of the occasion - an eloquent, stirring oration replete with patriotic sentiment and touched with both pathos and humor - was delivered by Hon. A. N. Bohlinger.

The company commander, Capt. Homer Cox, was then called to the microphone, and at the conclusion of a long burst of applause the popular officer expressed appreciation of the Company officers and men for the demonstration in their behalf. He pledged the parents and other relatives of the soldiers that all would be well cared for and watched over during their absence from home, and that come what might, they would deport themselves as soldiers and gentlemen.

Fay Andreys, President of the Dardanelle Chamber of Commerce, then presented letter sweaters to the five A.N.G. members who were also members of the Dardanelle High School football team the "Sand Lizards".

During the rendition of the program, veterans of the Spanish American War and World War occupied seats of honor on the platform.

The commissioned officers of the Company are: Captain Homer T. Cox, First Lieutenant Elbert F. Foster, Second Lieutenant Victor V. Callan and Second Lieutenant George A. Moore.

A battle is a prolonged combat involving large armies. An engagement may be a general encounter between armies, or a minor encounter between smaller forces. A skirmish is a small encounter usually incidental to a larger mailitary movement, while an action stresses the idea of active, frequently sharp, offensive and defensive movements. The term affair simply means a fight.

Reconnaissance, expedition, and scout are similar in meaning. A reconnaissance is an examination of a territory to gain information; a scout is much the same; and an expedition is a journey for a specific purpose. An operation is a complete military action or mission of some kind. A demonstration is an exhibition of force and a siege is a continued attempt to gain possession of a place.

A VETERAN DIED TODAY

He was getting old and paunchy and his hair was falling fast, and he sat around the Legion, telling stories of the past. Of a war that he had fought in and the deeds that he had done. In his exploits with his buddies; they were heroes, everyone. And 'tho sometimes, to his neighbors, his tales became a joke, all his buddies listened, for they knew whereof he spoke. But we'll hear his tales no longer, for ol' Bob has passed away, and the world's a little poorer, for a Veteran died today.

No, he won't be mourned by many, just his children and his wife. For he lived an ordinary, very quiet sort of life. He held a job and raised a family, quietly going on his way; and the world won't note his passing; 'tho a Veteran died today.

When politicans leave this earth, their bodies lie in state, while thousands note their passing and proclaim that they were great. Papers tell of their life stories, from the time that they were young, but the passing of a Veteran goes unnoticed, and unsung. Is the greatest contribution, to the welfare of our land, some jerk who breaks his promise and cons his fellow man? Or the ordinary fellow, who in times of war and strife, goes off to serve his Country and offers up his life? The politician's stipend and the style in which he lives, are sometimes disproportionate, to the service he gives. While the ordinary Veteran, who offered up his all, is paid off with a medal and perhaps a pension, small. It's so easy to forget them, for it is so long ago, that our Bobs and Jims and Johnnys, went to battle, but we know. It was for the politicians, with their compromise and ploys, who won for us the freedom, that our Country now enjoys. Should you find yourself in danger, with your enemies at hand, would you really want some cop-out, with his ever waffling stand? Or would you want a Veteran who has sworn to defend, his home, his kin, and Country, and would fight until the end?

He was just a common Veteran and his ranks are growing thin, but his presence should remind us, we may need his likes again. For when countries are in conflict, then we find the Military's part, is to clean up all the troubles, that the politicians start.

If we cannot do him honor, while he's here to hear the praise, then at least let's give him homage, at the ending of his days. Perhaps just a simple headline, in the paper that might say:

OUR COUNTRY IS IN MOURNING,
FOR A VETERAN DIED TODAY.

Judge R.E.. Cole died early this morning. Though not unexpected news of the death of Judge Reuben E. Cole, which occured at 8 O'Clock Monday morning, Nov 22, at his home in Portland Texas brought deep regret to his friends through out Yell County, where the greater portion of his long and useful life was spent. Reuben E. Cole son of James M.and Mary E. Cole was born in Neshhuba County, Georgia, February 11th,1846, thus being at the time of his death but a few months less than 81 years of age.
With his parents, Mr. Cole then a lad of 12 year moved to Arkansas in 1858. At the outbreak of the Civil War he was attending College in Newman,Ga. Abandoning his studies, he enlisted in the confederate Army, Joining Hill's Regiment and Cabel's Brigade,Fagan's Division Arkansas Cavalry, Gen. Sterling Prices' Army and throughout the four bloody years of the struggle he served his country faithfully and well.
Mr. Cole was married to Miss Mattie A. Wood, February 11th,1870. To this union were born four daughters, Misses Kate and Lilly and Lizzie Cole and Mrs. Atley Jacway all of Texas. and one son Charles E. Cole of Russellville,all of whom survive. He is also survived by a sister, Mrs P.J. Blevins of Dardanelle.
Mr. Cole served Yell County as a Sheriff at a time when it took a man of iron nerve and inflexible will to uphold the majesty of the law, and our older citizens yet tell of how faithfully he efficiently he performed his duties. Later he served two terms as county and probate Judge, and again his splendid ability, his honesty and zeal for the people's interests were reflected in the record he made. Durning most of his life Mr Cole was engaged in Farming. He put the best that was in him into his profession with the result that he was recognized as one of the States most progressive and successful farmers. In early life Mr. Cole united with the Baptist church and until his death lived a consistent earnest Christian ever interested and active in the work of his church and the betterment of his fellows. Some 12 or 15 years ago Judge Cole moved to Portland Texas, but he retained his love and affection for his old Yell County, home and it's people and made frequent visits here, Of late years he had suffered greatly from Rheumatism but suffering could not dim the sunshine of his soul and never did we meet him but that we felt better and brighter and happier because of the contact.

Judge Cole was laid to rest at Brearley Cemetery, The funeral service conduct by Rev. Charles F. Wilkins and Rev C.V. Hickerson .

21 June 1923

The Joe Wheeler Chapter U.D.C. of this place has authorized the local monument company to complete and install the initial half hundred markers for the graves of confederate Soldiers buried in Yell County. the total number required is estimated to reach between 900 and 1000, and then some graves will go unmarked because no one can locate them. The markers from Batesville Marble will be for Confederate soldiers only, and will bear a short legend identifying each grave. They will be erected under contract for all graves found, even though the family monument may be in place. The cost will be about five dollars each, the Chapter assuming the cost in all cases, but payments from families and friends will be expected where such persons are able to do so. The Chapter has decided that no confederate soldiers grave shall go unmarked and will keep on until the work is complete only slowing up, if at all to accumulate funds to meet the bills.

Left Little Rock Arkansas September 9,1943 at 125 P.M.. Had a wonderfull trip to San Diego California. Arrived Sept. 12, when I entered Boot Training. Took more shots than a Jew has money, I thought I would die then, but I lived through six weeks of hell ok and came out without a scratch. Had 3 months in Seaman Guard training, which was a very good deal. Had to help the poor drunken boots to their sack and go to Military funerals. Shipped out to San Diego destroyer Base in Jan for 4 weeks. Armed Guard school. Had a swell time there. met lots of swell guys. Had good chow most all the time. Went on a shake down cruse aboard the U.S.S, Sacremento. It came a hell of a storm that night. Everyone got Sea Sick buy my buddy and I. We sure had to laugh at those poor guys, because we were old Sea Dogs by now. Boy what a storm. The water rolled over the gun decks so much you had to hang on for dear life.

LIEUT.WILLSON WRITES INTERESTING LETTER

The following interesting letter was recently received by Mrs. M.E.Walker from her grandson, Lieutenant Freed Willson formely of Ola. who was in the thick of the fighting in France from the middle of September until the Armistice was signed on November,11th

France, Dec. 2,1918

Dear Mammaw and family--

There is always a lull after a storm and we have been in the quietest one of our young lives since the Armistice was declared. Three weeks ago yesterday we took up this position with the Germans just about a mile ahead of us. We went into a Chateau they had just left a few hours before and found their food still on the table. Our guns were laid on their objectives and were ready to blast away anew at the infernal profaner of all that is good and right. But they did not get to throw a single shell because it was no use! The Bosch had capitulated-- and we were ordered that all firing would cease at 11.00 A.M. the next morning. Today we are still in the same Chateau. The same abrupt quietude that fell upon us on that great day still reigns. Those same guns--and they are powerful 6-inch monsters have closed their mouths for ever I hope, and are now parked at a rail-head. All of our horses have been taken away from us and sent with the army of occupation. Also, about one-third of our officers and men have been sent to Germany with another division. What remains of the 315th Field Artillery is here waiting for orders to entrain for "somewhere" in France or America and those orders are sure to come soon. We don't know what is to become of us but, we think and hope we will be among the first troops to come home. If so I should see you people soon. I will say, however that I have had the most wonderful experiences of my lifetime, and I hope I never have any more wonderful, because it has been an awful struggle. We came into the -- the middle of September and took up a position just north west of Verdun on the famous Dead Man's Hill. Until Nov.11th we were right in the midst of all the fighting and when the curtain fell we, had pushed the Germans back about 50 kilometers. I won't attempt to tell you any of the many things that happened but will say "I have seen the War" and leave the rest until I see you.

Thomas and I found each other Saturday and maybe you think we didn't enjoy the twenty-four hours! I don't suppose I will see him again for some time maybe not until we get back to the States.

Hope all of you have escaped the "Flu" and enjoying Christmas. You should get this letter about the time Santa Claus comes around, so it will have to serve as a Christmas remembrance from me. I am anxious to see the baby, but I suppose he is no longer a baby, but a great big boy.

I certainly do enjoy your letters and wish you would not wait for answers to write. Tell Uncle Jim I will just wait until I come home to answer his unless I find out we will be over here much longer than I think. We are all simply wild to come home and I think it would be a big mistake not to send everybody possible back right away so they can produce instead of consume. In fact that is what they are planning to do.

Remember me to all my friends and relatives. Hope to see you soon

Love,
Freed

CO. "C" RECRUITING FOR MEXICAN BORDER DUTY

Capt. Fred C.Burnett, Commanding Company "C", 2nd Regt. A.N.G. received telegraphic instructions from Adjustant General Lloyd England monday to mobilize and recruit his command and await orders to move to Ft. Logan H. Roots where the Arkansas troops are being assembled preparatory to being transported to the Mexican Border for service.

Capt, Burnett immediately issued the necessary call and his company is now encamped on the Court House lawn, Efforts are being made to recruit the company to a minimum of 65 enlisted men. A later telegram from Gen. England states that when this strength is reached the Company will at once be ordered to Little Rock.

To date about 43 men have signed the oath of enlistment and Capt. Burnett hopes the have the necessary number by tomorrow night.

July 6,1916
COMPANY 'C ' TO LEAVE FRIDAY OR SATURDAY

Capt. Fred C. Burnett, commanding Company "C" end Regt. A.N.G. the local Military organization, expects to have his company recruited to full strength by tomorrow night, and that orders to entrain for Fort Roots Little Rock, will be received at once.

The officers of the company have been "shelling the woods" for the past week endeavoring to recruit the command to the necessary minimum of 65 enlisted men. Many more than this number have volunteered,but the rigid physical examination imposed by Dr. S.E. Miller under orders from the War Department has seriously depleted the ranks. Some ten or twelve men, fine material for soldiers in every respect save age, have also been turned down for lack of the consent of their parents to enlists.

At the hour of going to press 52 men have been examined and passed subscribed to the necessary oath of enlistment. A number more are awaiting examination.

The work of recruiting the company has been slow ,but the men accepted are far above the average in physique, intelligence and morals, and we feel sure the company will compare favorably with those of any other section or state.

It is probable that a big demonstration will mark the departure of the troops for Little Rock.

Authorative advices from headquarters are to the effect that the Arkansas troops will be encamped at Fort Roots for six weeks or two months before being sent to the border.

DARDANELLE COMPANY NOW AT FORT ROOTS

Company "C" 2nd Regt.A.N.G. , 56 men and three commissioned officers entrained at the Rock Island depot at 7.15 last Saturday morning for Fort Logan H, Roots, where they are now encamped. There was enthusiusm at the departure., lots of it but there were tears too and heart-aches and sighing among the vast throng of relatives and friends who assembled to bid good-bye and God speed to the gallent men who had responded to their country's call. Friday night the officers and men of Co."C" were tendered a rousing farewell demonstration by the citizens of Dardanelle. The entertainment was staged in the street between the Dardanelle and Farmers Banks and the speakers stand , refresfment tables and adjoining buildings were handsomely decorated with Flags and bunting. Patriotic addresses were delivered by Mayor C.C.Conlee,W.L. Lee, Neil Bohlinger and Judge M.L.Davis and a very beauitful and impressive prayer offered by Rev.S.S. Key. The Star Spangled Banner. America Dixie, and other patriotic airs were rendered by the Russellville Band. Capt, Fred C. Burnett commanding the local Military company, was called to the speakers stand and in a feeling way expressed the appreciation of the officers and men for the handsome demonstration accorded them. He also pledged the company to so conduct itself as to reflect credit on the town and county, At the conclusion of the speaking the entire assembly--some 1,800 people in all--sang "God Be With You Till We Meet Again" after which the Soldiers were treated to ice cream and cake.

Co. "C" reached Ft. Roots at 3 p.m. Saturday afternoon. All of the men have been vaccinated and treated with Anti-typhold serum. Detachments of men from Stuttgard and Rison have been added to the Dardanelle Company, giving it a Numerical strength of 78. Advices from the Adjustant General's office are to the effect that the Arkansas Troops will be in camp at Ft.Roots for several weeks before going to the border.. Following is a roster for Co. "C".

AN INTERESTING LETTER FROM CAPTAIN BURNETT
Deming,N.Mex. August 14,1916

Editor Post-Dispatch--
We are in Deming at last, and I have no doubt but, that the people back home are anxious to know something of our location, the climatic conditions etc.

Deming which is a beautiful little city of 4,000 population enjoys the most delightful climate I have ever experienced and the scenery here is as beautiful as the imagination can picture. There are mountains on all sides and all appear to be some 20 or 30 miles away. The Country from our camp to the foothills is as level as a floor, and the mountains seem to rise abruptly from the plain. they are absolutely barren of timber or vegetation of any kind except a scattered sage or small brush.

The days here are hot--that is, in the middle of the day--but there is always a fine breeze and you have no trouble keeping cool in the shade. Last night was our first here and I slept under two blankets, and not withstanding I had the walls of my tent down, I got really cold before morning.

We are within 30 miles of Columbu.(the town on which Villa made his raid) and can see the mountains through which he passed on his retreat into Mexico much plainer than Nebo can be seen from Dardanelle. A mountain here which appears to be 4 or 5 miles distant is usually from 25 to 50 miles away, and most of them rise in sharp peaks along the whole chain.

In addition to the two Arkansas regiments there is a batallion of Delaware Troops here. but the camp is being prepared for something like 25,000 troops who are expected to arrive soon. I understand the West Virginia Troops will be here this afternoon or tonight. From the preparations being made this camp is to be a permanent one. Large kitchens and mess halls for the men are being built. The Government, so I understand has leased a large tract of land around Deming for a period of two years with a seven year extension privilege, and it looks as though this is to be one of the places used for annual encampments for the National Guard.

The people here are more than hospitable and have shown us every courtesy. The enclosed "Welcome Arkansas" proclamation of the Mayor of Deming will give you some idea of our reception. The boys are all tickled over the ideal location of our camp. They are all in the best of health and spirts and some of them say they are going to locate here when the "War" is over. Of course, we have some sandstorms here but they are not half as bad as we had been told on the way down here, and I am sure we could not been sent to a better place.

On the way out here we passed through some of the most desolate looking plains imaginable--nothing but sand hills with broken mountain chains in the distance---yet it is an interesting sight and leads one to believe that it is as someone has described it, a country of " more rivers and less water, more cows and less milk and farther to look and less to see." We saw lots of prairie dogs and jack rabbits, and I saw two coyotes (small Prairie wolves) on the way out. Occasionally we passed through a strip of irrigated country and then we saw something pretty. It looks as though they would have to move the alfalfa off the field to find room to stack it. They also have some of the finest cattle you ever saw.

Your Friend,
Fred C. Burnett

P.S. I want to take back what I said about the sand storms out here. Since I wrote the foregoing we have experienced a "Cutter". Many of the cook tents were blown down and the air was so filled with sand that it was impossible to see a distance of 20 feet. I don"t believe any of the Arkansas boys lacked "sand" before the storm, but if they did the deficiency has been beautifully and abundantly supplied.

ED WESLEY TELLS OF LAST GREAT DRIVE

Linkenbach,Germany, March 14,1919

Dardanelle Post Dispatch,
Mr. George Upton:

Doubtless you have followed the newspaper reports of the great closing drive of the world war. However you will be interested to hear something of my experiences and impressions during the last campaign

On September 21st we left Susancourt to take up positions in the Argonne Forest."the graveyard of a million dead". Around Verdum,can you imagine the movement of 800,000 men silently through the night on all roads from all directions, with out light of any description, not even a cigarette glowing by day, sleeping concealed in the woods or ruined village and finally going into battle, moving ever forward with irresifible force, no let up day or night. And to be a part of this machine of liberty. We were there in the thick of it and heard the last guns of the world war each into silence near the historic battlefield of Verun.

It was a furtive life, stripped to primitive necessities. We became night prowling animals, by day crawling into holes, caves, dugouts, ditches trenches, or concealing ourselves among the trees and dense underbrush of the forest. So we lived for 50 days under shell fire, pressing forward always carrying on our work.

Late on Nov.10th my regiment was near, waiting for an order to the front to relieve another division. It was thus while waiting that we received a word to stay there another day as the rumor of the armistice filtered throughout the whole country. So, on the morning of Nov. 11th, we got up, rolled our packs, and were ready to move forward. The guns were booming, as usual. It did not sound like peace. Up in the day we began to get word from passing couriers that the armistice was signed. We laughed at them, for the guns still roared away. But at 11 a.m. came the silence and we heard no more guns. From time to time during the afternoon we got news from passing truck and laisson men, but still nothing official.

A drizzling rain was falling, In the gathering dusk we lined up for chow,(supper). It was then that the Colonel came along and said, "Boys, you may build a fire and have all the lights you want. It is finished," We were almost too tired to cheer. A celebration was in order. You can't celebrate much in rain and mud nor spread much joy with corned beef, hardtack, and coffee. But we did celebrate. We built fires; can you realize what it meant to us? For fifty days to live and never to light even a match or cigarette in the open after dark; to sleep in a dark hole in the ground, to close every crack and cranny that might emit a little light, before we dare light a candle or a cigarette; to hear always at night, the hum of airplanes overhead and to listen in the dark and identify the peculiar intermittent whir of the hunradiers and know that death was in the air, and wonder where the next bomb would hit; to dread the moonlight and hope for the cloud and drizzile to go to sleep and wake up and live the never-ending roar of the guns; to pass through horrors daily till we became indifferent to the sight of them; to hear the zip of the machine gun bullets, or flatten out against the earth as shell fragments cut the weeds and brush all around. And then to hear the word, "Boys, build your fires. it is ended."

So we gathered scraps of planks and broken timbers, splinters of torn trees and fences and built fires. Then we set around and talked and talked and talked with just the safe stars overhead. And I can tell you that the silence that night shouted to us louder than all bells, whistles and noisemaking of Chritendom. We just built fires; that was our celebration, So we will come home as new beings, as those who have been born again, for life will start anew with each of us. We will all see things with new eyes and recognize their true worth. All the simple, homely objects of daily life will henceforth be precious; they will carry an enhanced value for us We have done without and learned their worth. To just wash one's face in a clean bowl; to dry on a clean towel; to sleep in a clean bed, no matter how poor---what pleasure! To sit down once more amid decent surroundings---what joy! And to realize that the world has been purged by fire, to feel that civilization has at last fought its fight and stands triumphant, with its ideals of brotherhood of man once and forever placed before the eyes of all people. It makes life seem sweet and worth living,

So we are Coming home citizens of the world and sons of the United States, proud to stand with our faces toward the light and to work for the farther realization of the ideals for which we have fought

Truly Yours,
Private Edward Wesley,

PRIVAT GATELY TELLS OF FIGHTING IN FRANCE

The following interesting letter was recently received by Mrs. F.C. Gately of this city, from her son, Private Coy Gately, headquarters Co,125st F.A. A.E.F. France

France, Nov.25th 1918

Dear Mother and Jammie--

Our mail is still being censored, but we are now allowed to tell where we are and where we have been, so that is good enough.

There was a write-up in the New York Hearld a few days ago about the Thirty Second Division, and where it had been in the fighting. I have been in the 32nd Division ever since it left Alsace. I was with it when it went through Chateau Thierry on its way by the Marne to the Vesle Front.

I will first tell where I landed, and what a pretty country I saw before reaching France. The boat on which I came over landed at Glasgow, Scotland. We steamed up the Clyde River from the Atlantic through Scotland to Glasgow, and it was through Scotland that I saw the prettiest country,. Then we took a train from Glasgow to Winchester, England, and from there to South Hampton, England, then a boat across the English Channel to France.

Following is the write-up I previouly mentioned, the first two sentences being the heading, which was in "big black type. Gallant Thirty Second has fought twenty Germans "Crack",divisions. IT HAS FOUGHT OFF FIVE FRONTS AND NEVER YIELDED A YARD OF GROUND. When the American Army of occupation started its march toward the Rhine on Nov. 17th, one of our "Crack" Divisions, the Thirty-Second, was celebrating an anniversary. Just six months before, the Division first planted the American Flag on German soil in Alsace. On May 10th Wisconsin and Michigin men came under enemy shell fire, and from that date to November 11th the Division has out-ranged the boche guns. Only ten days after its turn in the trenches the Thirty-Second chased the boche from the Ourcq to the Vesle. Then it went to a sector north of Soissons and stormed Juvigny Plateau, Fighting side by side with the heroic poilus of General mangin. After that victory with the French it had a rest for ten days before getting ready for the final drive.

The American Army's scrap morth of Verdun was but three days old. when the Thirty Second went in, and for the next three weeks the Wisconsin and Michigian boys battled the boche for Kreimhide Stellung. It was they who finally broke through the key position of LaDame,from which they then pushed on to Freya Stellung, pushing the boche gunners out of Bantheville Wood. They carried the line up to the point where the final attack on Nov. 1st was launched, and following support of the division which crossed the Muse at Dun and captured Stenay.

In the last few days of the war the Thirty-Second went into the Muese bridgehead sector, and with the French were in the midst of attack when the armistice stopped the fighting. During the war the division has fought on five fronts, Alsace, the Vesle, Soissons, Argonne and the Muses, and has fought twenty of Germany's best Divisions, among them the Pruesian Guards. It has never yielded a yard of ground to the enemy's counter attacks.

The foregoing will tell you what Division I have been with and where I have been. I used to see Mark Flater every day, but have not seem him since we went into the last drive in September, but we are going to move again in a few days and I expect then we will all get together,

The Johnston boys (Joe and Vernon) and Robert Halliburton and Charmel lemoyne are in the Forty Second or "Rainbow" Division. I saw the Johnston boys about a month ago, but haven't seen Robert since we separated shortly after our arrival.

Well, Mother. this is about all I can write. I am sending you and grandma a silk Handkerchief souvenir of France for a Christmas present.

Am expecting to be with you all some time before next may. Hoping this finds you all well. and wishing you all a Merry Christmas.

Your Boy,
Coy

LOCAL BOY VISITS CITY OF VERSALLES

The following interesting letter was recently received by Mr. and Mrs. Van Marshek, who live 3 miles Northwest of town on the Ft.Smith road. It was written by their son Private Joe Marshek, who is serving with Battery E.142nd Field Artillery, now with the A.E.F. Near Versalles, France

Mothers Day,
May 11th 1919

Dear Mother,

How are you and all the folks? I am in the best of health and hope this finds you all the same. Well, Mother, this is Sunday morning and I am sitting here on my bed thinking of you all, I can imagine seeing home, with Father and Uncle Joe sitting on the porch, the yard full of beautiful roses, the birds twittering in the cedar trees, and everything so pretty and green. It does me good to think that I shall soon be there-perhaps in a few weeks.

I have been planning for the future recently: It seems as though the greatest days of my life are yet before me. I realize that my life will be what I make it, and that I must do my best at everything, which I have done so far.

Last Sunday I made a trip to "Versalles," the place where the peace treaty is to be signed, It is about 10 miles from here. I saw most of the Allied peace delegates there, including President Wilson, Colonel House, President Padrewski of Poland, and many other notables.

Well, I am still doing Guard Duty, I go on again this afternoon at 1.30. We are on guard every other day. It isn't so bad except that we have to be up so much at night. With best wishes, I am

Your Affectionate son,

Joe

EDWIN FARRIOR WRITES INTERESTING LETTER

Veterinary Detachment,131st F.A.
Camp Bowie, Texas, May 8,1918

Dear Dad,

I read your letter coming across the drill ground from supper, or to use Army slang,"Chow", and , as I have told you before, a letter from home is like a photograph of some one you care about a grreat deal; it can not always be bought with gold or sliver.

There are times when we who are soldiers have an un nameable emptiness somewhere around the heart that is closely akin to loneliness or, perhaps "home sickness", yet not one of us would willingly admit that it was the latter. Still, you must remember that most of us are boys, lots of them younger than I, and we can't become hardened to the old ties that an army camp of all things might cause, and I venture to say that at night after "Taps" has sounded and the camp lies still and quite save for the steady tramp of the sentinel on his beat who guards and protects us while we sleep, many a boy between his blankets is thinking of things way out beyond the camp things as far removed from war and bloodshed as the heavens are from the earth. If he thinks as I-- and I am sure he does--he pictures on memory's canvas scenes back in his old home town, and makes plans for what is to take place after the war.

But after nine months of army life I am beginning to love it, and each day I find things more interesting and satisfactory, and there is much to amuse one if he looks for it.

Of course, some day we know that our hour of departure will arrive and we shall go forth to teach some people (who have gotten entirely to ambitious and greedy) a lesson that they shall always remember and tell to their children and grandchildren for ages to come, that is providing there are any of the above mentioned people alive when America gets through chasing them across the Rhine.

I look upon this going out as a big adventure, Dad, with the end uncertain as all big adventures are; yet, I believe that when the time comes I shall just as eager to go as any of the others, and stake my chances on coming through a winner. If I lose, then I will have had the big adventure just the same. Even at that, what could be better than to have know that I did what I could; was just unlucky at the end. I am glad that I was able to live in this age, and while I am but an atom in the great molcule of the Army- and an atom is ten hundred thousand times smaller than a soap bubble's thin wall--yet, if the atoms give way and shirk, then the Molecule will become unstable, and in this age of the "survival "of the fittest" an unstable molecule will, like the soap bubble, burst easily.

Well, lest I go too deeply into the realm of chemistry to show you these things I shall change my topic of written conversation.

I may get shore duty in San Diego Cal. over this little deal, and here is hoping so, as I think I would like to get on the beach again and kick up a little real dirt and feel that I am not going to get U-boated the first time I go from one place to another.

How are all the folks? Give them my best love and regards and tell them to write to me once in a while as I always enjoy hearing from them. I would have written sooner but I have been so busy the last week that I have not gotten one good night's sleep and am just about all in. I have been working until 1,2, and 3 o'clock in the morning, and all day, at a killing pace, and it has begun to tell on me. Never again do I want to be shipwrecked on the Atlantic or the Pacific or any other ocean for that matter, as there is too much work to be done after it is over.

I have a nice office here where I am now and hope to keep it as long as possible. I suppose we will be here for at least 14 or 15 days yet, and probably longer. We do not know at the present what is in store for us. I asked the Captain this morning when we were going from here and he said that he did not know himself, only that maybe we would put a fast destroyer into commission and go out and look for U-boats on the atlantic. We lost all of our records, accounts, ledgers correspondence etc. and now our job is to get them made out again, and believe me, it is some job. Answer soon, with all the news.

Your brother,
Edwin

WILD ENTUSIASM MARKS END OF WAR

Wild enthusiasm greeted the official announcement here Monday that the Huns had accepted the armistice terms of the United States and the Allied Governments and that peace had really arrived at last.

Like wild-fire the news spread over the city, and within a few minutes bells were ringing, whistles blowing and anvils being fired. All business was suspended and practically the entire population of the city gathered on Front Street where a joyful demonstration was held.

Local orators were impressed into service and a number of patriotic speeches were made. Automobiles were draped in the National Colors and joined with citizens and school children in a very pretty parade.

Dr. D.M. Bulkley, a Y.M.C.A. secretary who had just returned from France, delivered a stirring speech during the afternoon.

Monday night a patriotic demonstration and peace jubilee was held in the Methodist Church building. Following a very impressive prayer by Dr. Eli Myers, the vast audience feelingly sung the "Star-Spangled Banner." Then a beautiful patriotic reading by Mrs. Davis was rendered.

Eloquent addresses were made by Hon.W.L.Lee, Hon. A.N. Bohlinger, Dr. Eli Myers, and Col. M.L. Davis. A very beautiful selection was sung by Mrs. Edgar Holiman. The audience then joined in singing "America." While the song was being sung M. Kaufan released a white dove, from which the National Colors, in 3-foot silken streamers, radiated. The snow-white symbol of peace mounted gracefully to the center of the great dome arching the auditorium, making an impressive picture that will never be forgotten by those who beheld it.

The meeting then closed with the benediction by Dr, Myers.

GERMAN EX-PRISONER WRITE LOCAL DOUGHBOY

The following letter from a German ex-prisoner of war was received recently ny Ed Hodges, a stalwart young farmer living a few miles North-West of this city on Route No.1, Mr. Hodges saw nearly a year's service in France, for a time being a guard at a prison camp where captured German soldiers were kept;

Hof in Hayern,
June 10, 1920

Dear Mr,. Hodges;

I hope you will still remember that little German war prisoner whom you guarded at Baulny, and who sometimes talked with you on Opremont Road.

How did you get home? Much as I was glad of your going home, I couldn't help to be very sorry at the same time, because I lost a kind guardsman.

We had to stay some more months in sunny France, as you know. It was the month of October when our repatriation began. How glad we were to get out of France! And how heartily we were welcomed by our folks at home! Surely, the best place is home! I often thought so in captivity and I think so still now, although it is a bad life, in Germany today. Oh, Mr. Hodges, you can scarely imagine how insufficient and expensive living is in Germany. Our bread is black and wet, and cost one mark the pound. In Pre-war time we paid five pfennig for it. Meat, butter, flour, eggs and milk are not to be had at all. Or, if one can get them, one must pay tremendously high prices for them. Meat and butter, for instance, are paid with 20 to 30 marks one pound. In pre-war time meat was paid with one-half mark and butter with one mark the pound. So you see that the good old time is over in Germany. But, nevertheless, I love my country still now, and I am glad to be at home. "Right or wrong, my Country!" This English Motto shall be ours now.

But now I better finish my letter. Excuse my bad English, and don't mind if I should have troubled you with it.

I should be very much pleased if you would write me a little letter in your turn. I remain

Yours Truly,
Wilhelm Herbosh

Hof in Bayern (Germany) Alscnbergetr 52.

PRIVATE JONES UNDER SHELL FIRE 21 DAYS

URBACH,GERMANY,
JAN,1ST 1919

Mr. Geo.F. Upton,
Dardanelle,Ark.

Kind Friend,

Having nothing much to do this evening but think of home, I thought I would write you a few lines as you might like to read a letter from this part of the world. This leaves me well and feeling fine. I am sure you all had a nice time Christmas, but it was rather a dull day for we boys in the A.E. F... Several thousand miles from home. I have seen some awfully pretty country since I have been in Europe. I have been in four different countries, France, Belglum, Luxemburg, and Germany. Have been in Germany since Dec ,1st, 1918 and am now about 15 miles on the east side of the Rhine, not far from Coblenz.

I am with the 32nd Division. I guess you have read of the 32nd as it is one of the best American Divisions in the A.E.F.. We have been on five fronts. On the Argonne front, I was in the front lines under continuous shelling for 21 days. I have been "Over the top" twice and believe me, I know what a real battle is. My first time over was on Oct. 9th, 1918, and we lost quite a few men. We were in the front line when the Armistice was signed, Nov. 11th, 1918 and you may be sure we boys were glad when the shells stopped bursting around us.

After the armistice we followed the Boche back across the Rhine, and that was some hike. We were one month on the road and you can bet we were out some of Uncle Sam's shoe leather.

I don't know how long we will be in this part of the world, but I don't think we will be in Germany very long now.

The people are awfully nice to us but, they know they would have to be. I can't like them, though, to save my life. I don't think it will be very long until all of us will be back home and can tell our wonderful stories about this Europe country, but I must say the good old U.S.A .comes ahead of them all.

When you see papa (W.J. Jones, Rt 2) you can tell him I am well and as fat as ever. Excuse the paper as this is all I have. I am quartered in a German school house and am writing this letter on paper taken from kids copy-book. The Y.M.C.A. folks never get us this close to the lines. Ha!Ha! They are not much to help the boys at the front, but I guess they are all right back in the S.O.S.

Wishing you a Happy New Year, and many of them, I am,

Sincerely your friend,
Private Willie D. Jones

MANY YELL COUNTY BOYS SAW DESPERATE SERVICE

New York City, N.Y.

Dear Mr. Pound,

As one of the 99 men called out by the local draft board at Danville on September 18,1917. born and raised in yell county, I feel like a full-blooded yell countian and thought I would write a few lines to you and the people of our great county. I will give a little history of myself and the other boys who went through with me. There were 60 of us "went in " together and were put into the same regiment, therefore I could keep in close touch with them until I was wounded. We joined the 38th Infantry, 3rd Division, July 7th. Our regiment was holding the front lines just east of Chareau Thierry, between Metz and Creyancy, directly in the path along which the Germans were trying to reach Paris.

July 15th the Huns started their last great offensive. The day was in favor and our regiment distinguished itself among all others and General Pershing recommended that in future it be called the "Rock of the Marine." There stands on the battle field a monument on which is inscribed a list of the names of the brave boys who fell on that glorious but bloody day, and included in the roster of heroes who made the supreme sacrifice are the names of the following sons of Yell County: Private Webb Green, of Plainview; Priviate Geo. M. Vess; of Havana, Private Roy Garner: of Chickalah,

The next engagement in which we participated was at Fismes, on the Vesle River. There Priviate Robert M. Taylor; of Rover, was wounded and never returned to the regiment, and Private Alvin S. Bates, of Sulpher Springs, was reported missing in action. From Fismes we went to Handelain-Court for a two weeks rest. We drilled ten hours a day while we rested.

Then we went into the All-American drive at Saint Mihiel, breeched the Hindenburg line, wiped out the trouble-some salient and, all told, made an advance of 13 kilometers--about 12 miles. In this desperate fighting there was no loss among the Yell County boys. We were relieved then and went to the Verdon sector. Here the big allied drive began September 26th and continued until the signing of the armistice.

The Rehmehule line, which was held with all the resistance the Germans could concertrate. My company was ordered to take Hill 144 and was the first to go into action. We went "Over the Top" about 6 o'clock in the morning, and within an hour we had the hill. Then I began carrying wounded men down the hill which was strewn with red blooded Americas, I made the fourth trip up the hill under machine gun fire from a German sniper ,but on my fourth time down he succeeded in hitting his target, and it knocked me out for a few hours.

About 4 P.M. the Huns started a counter attack, so I got my rifle and crawled back to the line to help the boys stop the gray-clad hordes; but about this time our own artillery put down a barrage and speedily ended the German thrust, At 8 p.m. I went to the aid station, When I left the battle line 53 of the boys were still going. Among them were Baxter Hunt of Gravelly, and Will Pharis of centerville. This was on Oct. 8th. I was sent to Base Hospital No.6 at Bordeaux, and from there to Departation Hospital No.3, New York City, where I am now.

Getting back in the good on U.S.A. is changing from one extreme to the other. It is almost like being transformed from hell to heaven. The ministering angels-- which is an appropriate name for the Red Cross nurses and workers-- seem almost supernatural. You get here everything that the heart could wish for, from

Our Regiment has been leaving battery at a time all this week for the artillery range, thirty-five miles from here, but even at that distance we can hear the guns very plainly. The boys are crazy about target pratice, especially at night, when they practice barrage fire, and have gas attacks,

There was an accident today at the system of trenches just outside of the camp. The 141st trench Mortar Battery were firing their guns at an attacking Regiment of Infantry in a sham battle when one of the guns exploded and killed a Lieuteant and five enlisted men and wounded three others.

Dad, if the Y.M.C.A., Men ever come to you for a donation don't turn them down for they have a warm place in our hearts.

Jimmie wants me to go somewhere with him, so will stop, or he will run me crazy with his "Hurry up, Doc. it's getting late; you can finish that tomorrow,"

Love to Dot and Jack and much for yourself.

Edwin,

P.S --Forgot to say that we had prunes again for "soupy," I mean supper, One boy said; "You can't tell the age of a prune by its wrinkles,"

DESCRIBES SINKING OF CRUISER SAN DIEGO
August 29,1918

The following interesting letter from Chief Yoeman Edwin Jones, who was aboard the illfated Cruiser, San Diego, which was sunk by a German Submaarine off the Long Island shore on July 19th, has been received by J.O. Jones, of this city, brother to Chief Yoeman Jones, who had rejoined the ship the day previous to the sinking, after a vist with relatives here.

J.O.Jones
Dardanelle,Ark,
Daer Brother,---

Your letter of the other day at hand, and was sure glad to hear from you. as you requested, I will tell you something of my experience when the San Diego was torpedoed by a Hun U-boat on July 19th.
We were sunk about 12 miles off the coast of Long Island, New York, just opposite point o' woods or Far Island Light, at about 11.08 A.M., July 19th. The ship sunk in about 15 fathoms of water 28 minutes from the time she was struck. We were hit aft on the port side just underneath the engines, the force of the explosion carried the port engine off its foundation and killed two men who were on watch in the engine room at the time. The casualty list was small compared to the large number of men on board, only six in all, and three of them are missing and it is not known whether they are dead are just missing. We were in the water for about three hours and 25 minutes before the first of the survivors were rescued by the SS. Mulfors, the SS. Busson, and SS.E.P. Jones, All coast-wise steamships. It was lucky they were coming our way as our radio was out of commission and we did not get off an S.O.S. call before it was too late, and just by the hand of providence we were sighted and picked up by these Vessels, which were bound for Boston Mass. The San Diego was pretty heavily loaded with coal and stores, as we were going to make a trip out of New York in about three days and we were ready for the trip.

After being struck we listed heavily to port and began to sink aft. After all hopes were lost "abandon ship" was given and all hands went over the sides. I lost my hat as I dived from the forecastle deck and did not see it any more after I came to the surface. I stayed in the sun so long that my forehead blistered and all the skin peeled off and it is just beginning to look halfway decent. No one saved anything except what they had on their backs, and some of the fellows who were not very good on the swim took off what clothes they had on and cast them adrift and when rescued they did not have anything on but the underwear they wore when the ship sunk. I was lucky and saved one suit of clothes and they were the ones that were on my back.

I lost all the other clothes that I owned, and every keepsake that I ever had went down with the ship to "Davey Jones Locker". We didn't get a look at the submarine that gave us such a jolt, but if we ever run across her in our future travels on a fast destroyer, I feel sorry for the bunch of bums that will be on her, as she is sure to meet the same punishment that the poor San Diego met, and more, as we instead to blow them into as many pieces as possible.

a limousine ride through the city and a free access to all the museums, theatres, and everything else in New York, including Jacobs chocolates, with which I have almost foundered myself.
Will see you good people of Yell County soon, I trust.

Sincerely your friend,
James O. Walker

OLD DARDANELLE BOY WRITES FROM FRANCE
FEBRUARY,1919

That the sacrifice made by Arkansas people by conserving sugar does not lack appreciation by the American soldier is attested by a letter received by Mrs. William T. Kidd, 1112 South eighteenth Street, from her brother, H.B. Toomer, with the American Army in France. The Soldier encloses a label that reads; This candy manufactured from sugar allotted to us by the citizens of the State of Arkansas, from savings made by the patriotic efforts in favor of the A.E.F. in France.

Number of Fort Smith people who denide the cravings of their "Sweettooth" will read Mr. Toomer's letter with interest.

Dear Sister; At mess today we were given a box of candy (each) bearing the label I enclose. For fear I might forget to tell you about it, I am doing it now, or I am sure you will be glad to know that some of the sugar you and Will did not have, stayed pretty close to home after all, or rather in the family as it were.

If nothing occurs to prevent it, I will get a two week's leave in a few days and will go to Nice, Monte Carlo; will get to step over into Italy and see the Alps. By the way, I wonder if you remember the lecture we heard in Dardanelle when we were children. ."Beyond the Alps Lies Italy." I have forgotten the old fellow's name but I can see his image yet, with Major Gee seated on the rostrum with him--stage rather, for it was in the old "Wagon Factory" Opera House.

The Goverment furishes a special leave train to carry leave men to Southern France. Has first class accomodations while they are there and relaxes all Military restraint--except of course, just enough to curb the more exuberant spirits. I am already preparing to tell the bugler (in my mind) to go to--at 6 in the morning and get up when I get ready, but of course, I'll never really be happy until I can put on my shoes first,

We are still in the dark as to when we will leave for home. Some of our bunch are going or gone, but fortunately no one is suffering because of my absence and I'll see it through. I do hope, though, to shoot a fourth of July firecracker in front of the News office at Dallas--Pull with me. Chance another letter or two anyway,"

H.B. Toomer is a son of the late Col. Bob Toomer, for many years a leading citizen of Dardanelle. He was born and reared here and his letter will be read with interest by his former school mates and friends.

JAMES LEE STUBBS IN NORTH AFRICAN FIGHT
FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 13,1942

Dear Mom and Dad,

Sorry to have neglected you for a few days. I know, perhaps you will worry, but you must forget all that, and from now on I will write as often as I possibly can. Please remember that and stop worrying. We are all very happy and well. When I get home I can tell you all the reason, but if you will read the papers you will understand. I truthfully hope that by the time you read this letter our part here will be over-- I don't think it will be long.

Maybe I can complete my trek around the world. Hope so. I am sorry I cannot write of my experiences, but I am keeping a note book of each day and you will be surprised when I read some of the things to you. I know I have been. We have a Captain Bacon in our Squadron who is from Bonneville. He knows Joe D Gault. and Rube Boyce,Jr. He is about their age. I had a very interesting talk with him. He knows several of the boys around Danville and a few girls at home. I may work on the plane he flies. Hope so .

To date we have been fortunate; our food is good and we have good quarters. so far barracks each time. Our Squadron has lost only one man in combat, and no planes. The group has lost one plane in combat. They have been here about three months, or may be a little longer. I think that is good. You probably have read a lot in the papers about them. All the officers and men are really swell. It is not like back home--It is one big happy family, all fighting for one big reason to get it over as soon as possible and come home! If we are lucky, I'm sure we will be home before you realize it---we may just miss one Christmas.

I think we have about four or five from Arkansas--I haven't seen them all, but I'm sure they are here. Tell everyone hello for me. I wish him soon. It is hard to understand, but sometimes I can't write when I'd like to.

Has George Gleason, Evart Adcock or Seth Boles been called yet? They really got me over here in a hurry. However, it isn't so bad. I'm glad I came the way I did. I'm glad the Americans came when they did. They will help a lot. We have had the Germans behind the eight ball and I hardly think they will get out so easily this time. Tell everyone hello for me. Wish I could write to all, but I don't have time. Both of you be very careful and take good care of yourselves.

I love you both,

Jimmie,

P.S.---This is foreign paper.

REVEALS HORROWS OF NAZI PRISON CAMP
MAY 4, 1945

The following letter from T/Sgt. Edney F. Jenkins, 127th Evacuation Hospital, S.M. APO 758 CARE P.M., New York City, N.Y. was received recently by his wife and son of Delaware,Ark.

Dachar, Germany, May 4, 1945.

Dearest Folks,

How are you all? Fine, I hope. I am o.k..

Well, they told us today that we could tell where we are, so here goes. I am at Dachar, Germany, at a German Prison camp. There are 35,000 living prisoners and 9,000 dead ones here when we moved in, and they were dying at the rate of 120 a day ! I have seen then hauled out of the stockade by the wagon-load to a building nearby, where they burn them.

When we moved into this building where the Germans burn the bodies, one room was just stacked full (of dead bodies), and besides these, there were 32 boxcar loads. Now I know this hard to believe, but I have seen it. They have every kind of disease you can think of, but I think mostly what was killing them was starvation and lice. I don't think there are any Americans here---mostly Poles, Russians and Checks, Anything you see or read about this place in the papers, I don't care how bad it is, you can say it is so. The people back home don't have any idea what has been going on over here. I didn't either until I saw it.

There were also lots of Germans lying around dead when we moved in. They were lying just where they had fallen when they were shot. When they took this place they (the bodies) lay here for about a week before they were moved. I've had to drive around lots of them. This Camp was run by SS troops. They were Hitler's special men who had taken an oath to do anything he said, and to die before they would give up.

When the Army came in here these SS troops changed to prisoner's clothes and got into the stockade with the real prisoners. But they have all been culled out now, I think; and boy! may be you think they are not hard on them Some of them were beaten to death by Russians and Poles who were their former prisoners.

The place sure is a mess to clean up. They are cleaning out the barracks for the wards and we are hauling off Rubbish. I am hauling today and writing this in my truck. I left Boston, Mass., January 18th and landed at LeHarve, France, January 30th, Went from there to Camp Luckey Strack and stayed there for about two months waiting for our equipment.

Well, it don't seem like I will get to come home anyway soon; guess I will land up in the Southwest Pacific before it is over, but i sure hope not. I'll quit for now and write more tomorrow. Love Always,

Francis Jenkins.

SOLDIER WRITE FROM FAR-OFF AUSTRALIA
JUNE 19TH 1942

The following letter from private W.E. Vinson, now with the U.S. Army in Australia, was recently received by his mother, Mrs. J.P. Harkey.

Dearest Mom,

Please accept my apologies for neglecting to write. I have been awfully busy and didn't realize it had been so long. Your guess was right about where I was. We came through Frisco to Australlia. I mean we stopped no where else. I hope I get to see some of the ones you said were here, but so far I haven't happened to run across them. Maybe soon.

It is supposed to be winter here now, but so far only the nights have been cool. Tonight (Sunday) it is raining, but isn't cold at all. Australia's land and Mountains are a lot like those of America, but the methods and times are at least twenty years behind those there. It is like calling back twenty years of your life to be here, The people on the whole think their word is as good as their bond. You know that should be the case everywhere, but it is very scarce in the U.S.A.

Everyone here calls us "Yanks" regardless of which side the Mason & Dixon line we came from. They think if you are from the U.S. you are a Yankee, and you cannot tell them otherwise.
The "Aussie" boys are not exactly pleased with or being here, except for one reason. We have made it almost an impossibility for them to have a girl friend. I don't blame them for being a little peeved, do you? I wonder if the girls there would be the same were the positions reversed. The older people here are very nice. I guess they realize their need for us more. Well so much for that.

We are doing quite a bit of work and I am getting, better everyday. I usually go to bed early, except when il go out on post, and I eat lots and work quite a bit. I really think it agrees with me.
I have been getting your letters right along. I believe the last was dated May 12th. I have heard from Sis ,several time and from Lucille dozens-- eight letters in one day from her. Different Post marks though. Keep them coming., for a letter helps lots.

Sure hope you are well, and that you had a nice visit in dear old Kansas City,. Boy, how I'd like to be there! I will write more often and will try and write you three or four times a month,
Bye darling. with love

Your son,
W.E. Vinson.

AN INTERESTING LETTER FROM STANLEY COWGER
U.S.S.VESTAL,
SUN, JULY 14,1918

Dear Mama ,and All;--

I gladly received your dear letter yesterday afternoon, also an issue of the grand old Post-Dispatch. Nothing do I appreciate more than a long letter from home and a chance to read our home paper.

Well Mama, I am still enjoying splendid health and am happy and contented all the time, having never even thought of being homesick, but you know a boy can't help but think of dear old home and homefolks often. Yes, I thought of you all several times on July 4th and what a wonderful time you were having. I had the pleasure of going ashore and witnessing some good ball games on the fourth,

I was glad to hear of the success of the Red Cross picnic at Chickalah; also of the over subscribed quota of the W.S.S. drive in the grand old County of Yell. I am inclined to think that Old Yell"County" over the top" with any of the rest of them.

I will grant you the privilege of using the allotment any way you think necessary, though I would rather that you buy War Saving Stamps, Liberty Bonds or contribute to the Red Cross, for I know they are playing a wonderful part in this war. Who wouldn't give to them? They deserve it. Here's hoping I get another nice Red Cross sweater. Will be able to say something more for the grand society then. You need not begrudge anything you do to help it.

I had the 4 to 8 watch this morning. We boys of the bridge force have purchased a percolator and we can make some of the best "java" you ever tasted. We bought it last Saturday, since which time we have had great fun making coffee.

I am still learning something everyday. We have plenty of drills, which I think are fine; also drills in signals and guns. I now weigh about 168 lbs, but don't think I look as well as before enlisting. Indeed I think the U.S Navy will make a man out of me. Will venture to say that anyone is better prepared for any walk of life after being a Sailor. The U.S. Navy has made good men of lots of boys, and here's hoping it makes a good man of me.

Well, dear Mama, I will close, hoping to hear again real soon from you and asking that you send me the paper. Give my best regards to everybody.
With lots of love to all,

Lovingly your son,
Stanley Cowger.

ROY GARNER KILLED ON WESTERN BATTLE FRONT
July 28 1918

With renewed emphasis the horror and hellishness of the war forced on the world by the blood-crazed Kaiser of the Huns was brought home to the people of Yell County Yesterday when it was announced that Roy Garner---brave, generous, handsome Roy--had been killed in battle on the western front of France Sunday. No details were given in the telegram conveying the sad intelligence.

Roy Garner was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Garner, who live a mile west of Chickalah. When war was declared more than a year ago he was one of the first to Volunteer. He had previously seen service on the Mexican border under Capt. Fred C. Burnett in Co. "C". 2nd Ark. Inf. Captain Burnett, who was much affected by the new stated the Roy was a model soldier, always obedient, cheerful and full of life and energy; the type of soldier that no hardship could conquer and no danger subdue.

Yell County joins the sorrowing parents in mourning the death of this brave boy, whom all of us loved and admired. The fact that he fell facing the foe of civilization, gallantly fighting in the cause of righteousness, is a consolation, though it does not assuage the grief we feel.

So far as we know Roy Garner is the first Yell County boy to die in battle in France. He arrived in France early April, and we understand was attached to the Field Artillery.

'THAT'S ALL THERE IS, THERE AINT NO MORE'

Messina, Sicily,

Pvt. Hays Cathey of Ola., Ark. leaned his rife against a wall, unhooked his pack from tired shoulders. and stepped into the street to take a look at Messina's bomb- wrecked buildings.
"Well" Cathey said with finality, "that's all there is, there ain't no more."

So he sat down on a debris littered curbstone and opened a tin of cheese.
In one sentence he condensed the story of the fall of Sicily, for he and other doughboys had run out of ridges to climb. Cities to capture and enemies to battle across each Rocky slope. This was the end of the road on the 38th day of the invasion. And across the straits of Messina loomed the dark Mountains of the mainland of Italy.

There probably will always be arguments as to who entered the Messina first, but it is fairly definite Two scouting parties reached the town about the same time, They were led Lieut, William Gunter of Commerce, Ga. and 2nd Lieutenants Ralph J. Yates of Austin,Tex and Jeff McNeely of Lubbock.Tex. The Yates-McNeely patrol came down the hills west of the city, while Gunter--whose reconnaissance platoon had spearheaded the last drive for Messina--entered from the north.

Capt. Jas. K. Perry died at his home in this city at midnight Saturday the 3rd inst., death being due to heart failure and the infirmities incident to old age. Capt. At the breaking out of the Civil War he enlisted in Company "H" 1st. Ark. Mounted Rifles, (Col. Churchill's Regiment) Commanded by Capt. He then went to Texas for a short time, but on recovering sufficiently to stay in the saddle he made the long , hard trip back to his old command horseback, and was assigned to duty in the quartermaster's department of the Trans-Mississippi, where he served until the surrender.

At the close of the war he returned to Dardanelle and engaged in the Mercantile business, which he followed successfully until ill health forced his retirement in 1904.

He was for many years closely identified with various commercial and industrial organizations here, and was prominent in the development and upbuilding of the county and its educational institutions in the distressing period following the Civil War.

For a number of years past he has been an acute sufferer of heart trouble and has traveled vainly in search of health.

Funeral services were conducted at the family home on the corner of Quay and third streets, Monday afternoon. Rev S..S.. Key and Rev. W.J. Hinsley officiating. During the funeral services all business in the city was suspended and an immense concourse of sorrowing friends followed the remains to their final resting place in Brearley Cemetery.

MARKER PLACED AT GRAVE OF COL. DAVID BREARLEY
OCTOBER 1, 1938

In an impressive ceremony last Saturday morning, October 1st, the George Izard Chapter, United Daughters of 1812, of Little Rock, placed a bronze marker at the grave Of Col. David Brearley , founder of Dardanelle At the Brearley family burial ground on north front street. Colonal Brearley has been dead 101 years this month,, he having died on October 4th, 1837, at the age of 57 years.

Colonel Brearley , who served in the war of 1812 and the Seminole Indian war, was appointed U.S. Agent to the Cherokee Indians by President Monroe in 1816. In 1820 he and Governor Miller, the first Governor of Arkansas territory, made a trip over the territory, and took a census of the Cherokees.

Colonel Brearley purchased the possessions of a French hunter, Joe Peran, who was domiciled near the point of Rocks (now Dardanelle, Rock), and known then as the Dardonnie-- in English, "sleep with one eye".

The sound of the Indian name and the peculiar surroundings of the location called to mind the Strait of Dardanells in Turkey, and this induced Colonel Brearley to change the name to Dardanelle. Here he established the Cherokee Indian Agency, and to this day the name remains unchanged.

The History of the Brearley family is interwoven with the history of Dardanelle and this section,the name being down from generation to generation from Colonel Brearley, the father of the town.

JUNIOR EDITOR P-D. DODGING COCOANUTS IN SOUTH PACIFIC

Southwest Pacific, January,1945
Dear Mom and Pop;

After leaving Corpus Christi on November 1st, was in San Diego until thanksgiving. Spent the week-end in Los Angeles with Eldridge, Edna and Mary Jane. They were getting ready to go to Arkansas. I know you enjoyed their visit with you. We were 14 days coming to Hawaii. I didn't get seasick, but the second day out we ran into some rough weather and I could have felt lots better. Many of the boys "erped "everywhere.

Saw flying fish and sharks coning over. Also saw where the Japs bombed Pearl harbor. We are now in the Admiralty Islands, We were 11 days coming over here. Arrived safe and well, deep in the South Pacific. Crossed the Equater and was initiated into the " Ancient order of the Deep" The Island we are on is very pretty, but small--no town or village here. Some natives--they are small and odd-looking--come often to the Island. It is not so hot here, and our living conditions are not too bad. There are no misquitoes here, but the water is very poor---too salty. However, we have been able to drink it.

There are some captured Jap guns on this Island. We walked around the shore-line of the island several days ago, picking up pretty shells and coral. There are plenty of them. The Water is beautiful--clear as crystal. We spent Christmas Day A board ship. Had a big Christmas supper, I went over to Honolulu one Sunday, visited Wakiki Beach and the Royal Hawailian Hotel. They had beautiful Hawailian Hula girls give some native dances for us.

I am working today, censoring mail. You get quite a variety of duties when you are on general detail, as we are here now. We are used where needed most. I have censored letters, clerked in a master of arms shack, helped check in a unloading of cargo ships, handled mail sacks, and many other jobs. I should ba a "Jack of all trades" 'ere long.

Have seen several boys I knew at Corpus Christi; saw a former Dardanelle boy, Cecil Adcock, in Hawaii. we are still not permanently assigned. Mom, if you do not hear from me,even for weeks at a time, do not worry. Mail is going to be slow in getting to you. I have not received mail for over six weeks. Feel sure I will get some soon, and hope I get some Post-Dispatchs in the lot. Write me all the news, and Mom, write often. All we have to look forward to is mail. Don't worry about me-- I am well and gaining weight. Hope you are all well. Will send you a permanent address soon. Don't worry about not hearing from me regularly--the only danger I am in here on the beautiful Island is from falling cocoanuts! We live in a splendid grove of cocoanuts palms and when hungry just go out and knock down a luscious cocoanut.

Pfc. GRAY TELL OF WOUNDING IN ITALY

(The following letter was recently received by Mr. and Mrs. Andy Gray from their son Pfc. Andy Junior Gray, who was seriously wounded in action in Italy, and later returned to the United States. He is now in Gardnier General Hospital, Chicago, Illinois.--Editor.)

February 8,1948,
Dear Folks,

How are you making it by now? I am fine. Received several letters today. Four were late ones, with this address. Also got a package of popcorn. Many thanks. Sure glad to hear from you and to get the corn. I am sending this letter free. Everyone says free mail here in the States is just as quick as air mail, and I'm not in a big rush,Ha! You can send your letters just plain 3c stamps and they will get here about as fast as airmail.

Lillie Raye, you can do what you want to about your fountian pen; like I said, I may lose or get it broken. Mama , you can send my watch any time you want to. Sorry to hear about old "Popeye". Something better be done with him. He is dangerous around the kids-- might have some kind of disease and give it to the other dogs.

Mama, I never get tired of reading any mail I get if it is from home. Dosen't matter if it is the same thing every day. This is a good hospital to be in.--they give you everything possible to entertain you; they come to your ward with books, magazines, papers, and lots of other things. Bob Hope was here today. I heard him over the radio and nearly burst my sides laughting at him. After the program was over he came up to the ward and I saw him in person.

Yes, it is pretty cold up here-- a crow flew over the other day and his shadow froze! Mary Olga, I don't know what you can do with the animals and Lillie Raye--put them in the zoo, I guess! Mama, you have asked about my wounds in several ways and I would always get around answering you-- I didn't know how I was going to make it, and I didn't want to give you false hopes. But now, as I have pulled through, I will tell you all I can think of. It will only take time now.

First, the way I was hurt: We pulled out of our gun position late one evening to move on up closer to the front lines---pulled out onto the road and waited around for a while until it got good and dark before we started. We had nearly reached our position when"Jerry", dropped a bomb on us. There were twelve of us in the back of the truck and the bomb hit right in the middle of us--blew us in every direction--killed three of the boys right beside of me--blew me way up in the air. I came down between two steel bridge railings lying by the roadside ditch. The steel railings saved my life. We had thirty rounds od smoke shells on the truck.

All went off and came right over me, I was wedged in so that I couldn't move. got somefew power burns and some small ppieces of sharpnel in my chin. The bomb broke my arm and my leg---both compound injuries. After they pulled me out and got me in the ambulance I was conscious for around an hour, then was unconscious for three days--and here I am, back in the dear old U.S.A.---all in one piece!

Love to all.

LOCAL SAILOR BOY HAVING GOOD TIME
MARCH 19,1942

The Following interesting letter from Jim Scott, Seaman Second Class, U.S. Navy, was received the first of the week by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Scott. The picture mentioned Jim with a full beard, he having been for more than a month on duty where there were no barbers. Jim, who has been in the Navy since last July, was in Pearl Harbor at the time the Japs made their treacherous attack, but escaped uninjured:
Honolulu,Hawaiian Islands, Royal Hawaiia Hotel, March 4th 1942
Dear Mother, Got your lettes, all except the one with the five "Bucks". Also received letters from Sis and Aunt Ree. Will answer them, and part of your questions. Am enclosing a picture---hope you like it. Am ok and for the next rwo weeks am going to have a good time, I hope.
Mother if you don't hear from me for quite a while, don't worry. I'll be in a place where i can't write. I would like to have the Kodak, but am not allowed to use one, so put a rain check on it will you?
Mom, I sure wish you could be here and see this beautiful place and enjoy it with me. It really is a swell place. I went swimming at the famous Waikai Beach this evening, then later danced to the music of a good Sailor band or Orchestea. Boy, I've got a swell room here. It looks out over the ocean and I go to sleep with the music of the surf, sounding in my ears. The famous landmark, Diamond head, is very beautiful, Gee! I wish you were here: we would really have fun.
Tell Reece, I don't know what to name his mare, but I would sure like to ride her.
Dad, don't let all of the cattle die, for I want to buy a few of them on the Stall-a-while plan after the War is over. Tell jack and Wanda and all the rest hello for me.
With love, your son, Jim

SOLDIER SLAIN BY DANVILLE MARSHALL
12 AUGUST 1944
Private Floyd O. Havener, aged 27, who until his induction into the U.S. Army was a resident of Dutch Creek Valley west of Danville, was shot and killed on the main business street of Danville about 4;30 o'clock last Saturday afternoon by Riley Moss, aged 50, City Marshal of Danville. Private Havener, a member of the Army Medical Corps. has been stationed at Thomasville,Ga. but was being transferred to another Camp, and enroute was to spend a short furlongh with his wife and parents, Mr.and Mrs. Lee Havener, near Danville.
It is said that on arriving in Danville the Soldier met two friends from Dutch Creek Valley, a man named Jones and a neighbor, Rivie Millard. The three are said to have been drinking and the Marshal is said to have remonstrated with them. During the early afternoon, Jones and Millard were arrested and placed in Jail by Marshal Moss. Some time later Priviate Havener, is said to have gone to the Marshal, telling him that if he would release the men he would take them to their homes. Witnesses differ somewhat as to just what happened next, but all agree that the officer accused the soldier of having threatened during the Early afternoon to get him and that he Moss drew and cocked his pistol. Havener is said to have denied that he made threats, and to have stated that he wanted no trouble. It is said that the soldier removed his hands from his trousers pocket and held them out from his sides, fingers extended , showing that he was unarmed.
Witnesses state that Moss continued to curse the soldier, and that as Havener stepped away from the leveled weapon of the officer the latter fired on him from a distance of but a few feet., the heavy bullet striking the victim just below the heart.. As the Soldier reeled backward, the officer fired a second shot, the bullet again striking Havener in the chest. The fatally wounded man then staggered across the street to the side entrance of Stringfield Hotel ,and as moss fired the third time the soldier fell dead.
The business section of Danville was crowed at the time, and an angry mob, including a number of soldiers and sailors, soon gathered, and threats of vengence caused local officers to take Moss into custody and rush him out of town. Excitement for a time was intense and state police and a detail of soldiers from Camp Chaffee were hurried to the scene.

Marshall Moss was given a hearing Monday and was bound over on a first degree murder charge to await the action of the grand jury. He is married and has a son serving in the U. S .Army in New Guinea.
A Military funeral was given the victim of the tragic affair Wednesday Afternoon. Burial was in Moss Creek Cemetery.

C.S.A. CIVIL WAR VETERANS----16 NOVEMBER,1915

Editor P.D.--- Sixty three yell county ex-confederate veterans enjoyed the lavish hospitality of the citizens of Danville at the Annual county reunion last week. The Oldest Veteran present was G.L. Johnson, aged 85, and the youngest was W.J. Parks, aged 67. The Annual memorial service, at which I as Chaplain preached the memorial sermon, brought many touching memories to mind, it being just 50 years since I first rode into Danville on my Army horse, an ex-confederate soldier, but a full-fledged Methodist Circuit Rider. I preached the first sermon of my life in the old County, Court House there one rainy Thursday night, using the Judge's stand as a pulpit. I still have the old Army saddle that I rode on that occasion. S.S. Key

TO MARK GRAVES OF ALL CONFEDERATE DEAD
4-5-1923
The Joe Wheeler Chapter of the U.D.C. is on the eve of contracting for a personal marker for the grave of every confederate Veteran who is buried in Yell County,and that no such Veteran's grave may be over looked, all relatives and friends of such veterans, and all who have a proper affection for those who wore the Gray, and now are gone to their last resting place, are asked to take an active interest in locating such graves, and to notify this Chapter at once so that a sufficient number of Markers may be contracted at one time, thus securing the lower rate of Quantity purchase.
These markers are to be placed at each grave, whether the Veteran has a monument over him or not. The markers will be distinctive and show to future generations that the soil of this county has resting in its bosom those of the earth's finest and best. Graves of Veterans outside of the county may be marked by their loving ones, securing the same class of Markers as will be used here, thus getting the lower Rate.

FIND CIVIL WAR SHELL

An unexploded cannon shell, perhaps one used during the Civil War was unearthed by Lester Nunnley, on Lands just West of the new elementary school building last week. The shell is very rusty, and has never been exploded,so say those who have examined it. It is on display in the Post-Dispatch window.

UNITED DAUGHTERS OF THE CONFEDERATES "CIVIL WAR"

The Joe Wheeler Chapter U.D.C., of this place has authorized the local monument company to complete and install the initial half-hundred markers for the graves of Confederate Soldiers buried in Yell County,. The total number required is estimated to reach between 900 and 1000, and then some graves will go unmarked because no one can locate them. The markers, of Batesville Marble, will be for Confederate Soldiers only, and will bear a short legend identifying each grave. They will be erected under contract for all graves found, even though the family monument may be in place. The cost will be about five dollars each, the chapter assuming the cost, in all cases, but payments from families and friends will be expected where such persons are able to do so. The Chapter has decided that no Confederate Soldier's grave shall go unmarked, and will keep on until the work is complete, only slowing up, if at all to accumulate funds to meet the bills.

ONLY TEN CONFEDERATE VETERANS IN COUNTY
MARCH 26, 19 3-

Two communcations recently received by the Post-Dispatch bear startling witness to the rapidly diminishing ranks of the mighty gray clad host that rallied under the "Stars and Bars" in the stirring days of '61', and during the four bloody years that followed, though outnumbered, out armed, out equipped and out financed as they were. The gallantry and heroism they displayed won the admiration, of the world and endowed with undying lustre the sacred memory of the "Lost Cause".

Both communications follow—The first, from Mr. J.J. Jackson, of this city, reveals that only ten ex-confederate Veterans are shown on the official rolls of the County Camp.

The second communication is from Rev. N.E. Fair, of Belleville, who throughout a long lifetime has fought as valiantly as a Soldier of the Cross as he did as a Soldier of the Confederacy in the days of his youth.. Editor Post-Dispatch.---

I notice in some of the papers recently of the deaths of Comrades J.F. Oates, of Havana, and J.M. Misennhimer, of Belleville. Acquaintances and special friends of writer for sixty-five years. These occurances of Divine Providence bring sadness and sorrow to the hearts of their comrades who yet survive. I hold the sworn affidavits of comrades J.F.,Oates, Frank Carr, and George McPherson, testifying to my war record as a confederate Soldier.

Since July 10th. 1930, seven Veterans of Yell County have passed away. Their names are as follows; Jno. W. Blevins, Jack Parks, D.G. Love, Z.G. Dyer, J.R. Chism, J.M. Misenhimer, and Jno. F. Oates., all members of McIntosh Camp No.531 as long as the Camp continued to function.

The passing of the above named conrades leaves in Yell County the following Veterans; S.S. key,Red R. Williams, Jack Sandlin, R.D. Holt, J.A. Connelley, J.M. Storment, H. E. Flurry, W.B. Lemoyne, N.E. Fair, and the writer,(J.J. Jackson)- just ten.

There are other pensioners in the county, but I , an Adjutant of the County Camp, have no record of their war service as enlisted soldiers or sailors in the Confederate Army or Navy, as they never met with us in any of our county Reunions, nor joined the camp. If I have omitted the name of any surviving comrade in the County, please let me hear from you.

LIEUT. FRENCH WRITES INTERESTING LETTER
DECEMBER 12,1918

Everyone in camp was celebrating last night, to know the Kasier is whipped, and whipped badly, and the United States is going to make him pay, and pay dearly, for all he has done, and God knows he has done enough,. First Lieut. Oscar French , of this city, now overseas, writes his parents, Mr. And Mrs. E.S. French. The letter is dated November 12, and is one of the first accounts of peace celebrations received from the A.E.F.

Lieutenant French says; "We are all glad, but sore because we don't think we will get to swat him much, if any, The terms of peace which Germany has accepted are something fierce. I did not think they would ever humble themselves. You may not know it, but these a Americans and French are whipping the fire out if the Huns. I visited Rheims last Saturday. It is an ancient city of 50.000 people in peace time. I also visited the Palace of Justice and the Musceum. Stayed at the Hotel de France and came back across country in an army truck and saw some of the prettiest country I believe I ever saw. Not many of the fields are in cultivation due to the fact that everyone is in the army except the women and children and old men.

" Lots of German prisoners are here. Mostly kids,15,16, and 17 years old. Shows what shape the Germans were getting in. There is no "Flu" over here to amount to anything, so you can rest easy on that matter. From all indications they won't need any men over here. Uncle Sam's army boys are some wildcats, in a battle, they just go right on over and you can't stop them," Lieutentant French was a member of the Arkansas National Guards for 16 years at one time being Captain of the Dardanelle Company. He volunteered his services for the Mexican trouble just before the present war and was commissioned a First Lieutenant..

U.S.NAVY NEEDS MORE NEGRO MEN TO SERVE AS MESS ATTENDANTS
12-4-1941

An unusual opportunity is opened to negroes between 17 and 50 years of age to join the U.S. Navy during the recruiting campaign which is now under way in Arkansas, according to George Upton Jr. Navy Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

An unlimited quota of negro men may enlist in the Navy or Naval Reserve as mess attendants. Special inducements is offered to Negro men who are experienced waiter, cooks, and stewards. If especially well fitted they may enlist as mess attendants 2nd or 1st class at pay of 38 to 54 dollars per month and keep.

All men enlisting in the Naval Reserve will be required to serve during the period of the National emergency only. They will be released from active duty as soon after the emergency as their services can be spared regardless of the number of years remaining in their enlistment. Men with dependents may enlist if they can properly support their dependents upon their pay.

Further information can be obtained by those interested by signing the coupon in the large advertisement of the U.S. Navy in this issue and sending it to the Dardanelle Post-Dispatch immediately.

A COURAGEOUS LETTER FROM GALLANT SOLDIER
March 28,1945

The following brave letter was recently received by Mrs. Seth McConnell from her son Buck, who lost both legs in the Pacific theatre of war in March. It displays wonderful courage and fortitude, and will be read with both admiration and pity by the host of friends of this gallant young soldier.

Dear Mother:

This letter is being written for me by one of the men of the hospital in which I am a patient, because I can't write, due to a slight injury to my hand. It isn't for this injury alone that I am in the hospital. I was pretty badly hurt in an explosion on the 26th. The Doctors and everybody say that my recovery has been absolutely remarkable and that I should get along all right from now on. Please don't be upset when I tell you my injuries, because I already great confidence that I'll get along well in spite of them. They had to take both of my legs off. I am sure that it was necessary , as I saw them before I was put to sleep. All the Doctor's talked it over and agreed readily that it had to be done. I know they felt very badly about it, though.

They have given me hints about how well I will manage with artifical legs and I am sure everything will turn out o.k.. I am not worried, what had to be , had to be.

Personally, I feel pretty good and am eating well. We had chilled melon last night, and have had good eggnogs with a drop of Xano spirits in them to build us up faster. I hope you take this bad news as easily as I have. I think it won't be many weeks before I see you again. I send you my love and a warm Easter greeting. Your Loving son, Buck

The following letter, written by a "Buddy" of Buck's has also been received.
APRIL 1ST,1945

Dear Mrs. McConnell

Being a very good friend of your son, Mack,(Buck), I thought I would take this opportunity to drop you a line and let you know how he is getting along. I have just come from the hospital , visiting with him. He is feeling fine and is in good spirits. I took him some magazines to read, a pipe and other items that we can get from the P.X. I sat and talked with him a long time.

Mack has plenty of visitors, as all the boys in the Battery think the world of him. Each time we go down we take something he would like to have. I am sorry I can't make mention of the accident, as regulations forbid it.

I've, worked with Mack a long time and couldn't find a better man or a more sincere friend. We feel very badly about the accident.

Mrs. McConnell, this is about all the time I have left, and in closing, I want to say that Mack is one of the best men I know, and I can understand how proud you must be of him. He will be missed by all the boys here in the Battery. My sympathy goes out to you and the other members of the family . May God bless you all, with only good luck in the future. Yours Truly,, Cpl. Ollie V. Coker.

FROM THE FILES OF THE P-D
5-15-1941
Thursday, May 16, 1918

Dardanelle is proud of her colored citizens and their many manifest actions of patriotism, loyalty and good citizenship. The auction sale articles contributed by the colored folks, which was held on front street last Saturday, and which netted the Red Cross the handsome sum of $152, would have been a creditable effort for any community of people, white or black, in any section of Yell County. The splendid musical program rendered and the stirring speeches made by local Negroes gave additional reason for a just pride in their accomplishments.

A score or more Yell County Negro boys are now in the training camps of the army, and without exception went cheerfully and willingly, Yell County Negroes have been liberal buyers of War Saving Stamps and Liberty Bonds; they have generously contributed to the Red Cross and the Y.M.C.A.; they are doing their part in raising and conserving food.—in short, as a class, they are industrious, patriotic, law-abiding citizens and we recognize and appreciate their worth.

CARDEN BOTTOM BOY TELLS OF FOOD IN UNCLE SAM'S NAVY
NOVEMBER 29,1942

A letter was received last week by Mr. And Mrs. Stanley Stewart of R.F.D.3, from their son, Woodie Stewart, who has been in the Navy for nine years. The letter bore no post-mark, but it is safe to bet that young Stewart is doing his part in exterminating the Japs in the Southwest Pacific. Mr. And Mrs. Stewart have two other sons in the Nation's armed forces; Shorty, who is a Seaman stationed at San Diego,Calif. And James, who is in the U.S.Army, stationed in Oregon. Following is Woodie Stewart's letter.

Dear Mother, Dad, and kids,

A few lines to let you know that I am still well and safe . I hope that this finds all of you well and enjoying yourselves. Here I am back from chow. We had fried chicken , creamed potatoes, green peasm gravy, and cake. Sure was good. While I am on the subject of food., let me tell you about our Thanksgiving dinner, We had Roast Turkey, dressing, gravy, cranberry sauce, creamed Potatoes, green peas, soup. English Walnuts, milk, ice cream and cake with strawberries, pumpkin pie, and a package of cigarettes. Some dinner!

If I don't stop eating so much I'll soon be as fat as Cecil Vaughn. My clothes are "getting smaller" every day—if you get what I mean. How are the grandfolks getting along. Give my love to them and tell them I haven't forgotten them. I hope this finds them in the best of health.

I won't get to spend this Christmas with you, but hope to be able to spend Christmas of 1943 with you. That will be the fifth Christmas since I was home with you. If you remember, Christmas of 1938 was the fifth Christmas from the year I enlisted in the navy. So here is hoping that I will be able to make it the second Christmas in ten years with you. May the Lord let this be a pleasant Christmas for you all.

I will close now, so give my love to all, and answer soon. I hope you are all well and happy when you receive this. Your loving son, Woodie

LETTERS FROM CHICKAMUAGA, GEORGIA SPANISH AMERICA WAR
MEXICAN BORDER WAR
POST DISPATCH 1905-1959

The following letter was written to the Editor of the Post Dispatch from Camp Thomas during the Spanish-American War by Ben wirt, near 60 years ago. Mr. Wirt, former resident now lives at Little Rock. It was written in reply to complaints about soldiers being half fed.

Dear Sir,

Perhaps a few words from one of the Dardanelle boys will be of interest to you and your readers. This is a beautiful place for a Soldiers camp, being high and dry, plenty of good shade for the camp grounds and old fields for drilling. We have hours drill each day, two and half in the morning and one and one half in the afternoon. Have gone through all the drills up to a sham battle since we arrived here. All of the companies are getting well drilled. Company L. is one of the best drilled in the regiment. All the boys take an interest in learning each new drill.

There is but very little sickness. Some of the boys still have sore arms, but are getting along nicely. Some few want to go home. They are about the sickest in our company. Sunday is a very dull day. We do not have any drill. Most of us spend the day going over the park looking at the different monuments. By them we can tell the position of all the troops, and at what time they held a certain place; also the number killed and wounded. Some of the boys find Grape shot and pieces of bomb shells every day, also Minie balls.

Orders are being enforced and it goes hard with some to have to obey, but they don't care to go to the Guard house, so they do obey. We have not been fully equipped yet. Lack some uniforms and all our guns. Will get everything in a few days. We get plenty to eat and have all the time. I have noticed in several of the papers that Soldiers are not half fed. I think this is all a mistake. We get beans, potatoes, beef, tomatoes, bread, and some times fresh cabbage.

All the boys are anxious for pay day to come. It has been so we could hardly get postage stamps, but have it arranged so we can get them all right now. Some of the officers think that we will be ordered to the front in a short time. Most all of the boys seem to want to go. I will be glad when we do go, although we will have a harder time than we do now.

With kindest regards to all of my Yell County friends, and wishing success to the P-D will close.
Yours respectfully, Ben F. Wirt

COMPANY "C"
2nd Regt. A.S.G.

What is a more beautiful and interesting sight than that of a company of young men, the life and blood of our grand Country, attired in the uniform of Uncle Sam, drilled and educated for the protection of our people. The caption of this article gives food for immeasurable thought. Here are 37 young men from some of our best families who have given themselves to be called at any minute to the scene or Yellow Fever, riot, bloodshed etc,. From whence many may never return. There are several companies of Militia in the State of Arkansas , and perhaps no more manly or braver set of fellows can be found than those making up the Co. "C" of the 2nd Regt. A.S.G. at Dardanelle, which was organized Nov. 19th, 1901 and today has the following officers and members; Captain; W.L. Fowlkes; Ist Lieut.;H.C. Catlett; 2nd Lieut.;E.O. Ragland; Ist Sergt.; O. French; Q.M.—F.H. Welser; Sergeants; J.P. Byers, B.F. Upton, A. Swindle, CorporalC. Gray, E. Shinn, J. Battenfield, C. Adney, H. Miles,' PRIVATES, W.A. Gooch, J. Stirman, T. Evans, H. Ragland, J.R. Dacus, C. Westlake, C. George, Virgle Sugg, Vernon Sugg, N. Thompson, L. Davis, M.Madden, S. Johnson, N. Veasey, B. Veasey, W. Flater, J. Minton, R. Griffin, B. Evins, W.R. Aikins, G.Gee, J.E. Salder, F. Gray, T. Ypton, Too much praise can not be given these young men for their patriotism and sprit.

Many of them are among Dardanelle's prominent, business men and salesmen, and in thus volunteering to leave their business and chosen avocations on possibly a few hours notice, by the imperative command of the Government, and rush to scenes of disease or strife, distinguishes these young men as ones of whom our citizens should feel proud.

The company is drilling regular and becoming efficient in the details of Military tactics and discipline under the charge of competent and capable officers. A great interest is ,and should always be taken in this organization by the members and town citizens, as it is an institution worthy of considerable notice.

Captain Fowlkes has a fine command over his men, and is personally a young man who is much respected by the entire community. He should be given all possible encouragement to make this one of the best drilled companies in the State. At the St. Louis world's fair a number of these men distinguished themselves for fine work as a part of the regiment chosen by the State to take part in the exercises of Arkansas day.

That Captain Fowlkes has fine material in his company is beyond a doubt and our business men and citizens generally should be willing and eager to favor and help the organization in every way possible, as the company is well made up, and deserves much at the hands of our people.

FEDERALS TOOK LITTLE ROCK 61 YEARS AGO TODAY

The following interesting bit of history from the pen of Col. Dick Brugman appeared in yesterday's Arkansas Gazette;

It was 61 years ago today that the Federal army occupied Little Rock. During the day the artillery of the Federal batteries engaged in desultory firing on the North side of the river, several miles Northeast of the city. East of Little Rock, in Badgett township, there were skirmishes by the infantry.

The town was wide open in those days. Saloons were plentiful and there were several gambling houses in the downtown district, One was on the ground floor in the Anthony house on East Markham street at Scott, and another at the foot of main street. And there were others. There were faro, banks, keno, roulette, chuck-a-luck, route-et-noir, and other games in operation.

The advance guard of the Union forces, the third Minnesota Volunteers, crossed the Arkansas river on a pontoon bridge at the foot of Commerce street, about 5 o'clock in the afternoon. The regiment marched up Markham street, and pitched tents on the lawn in front of the old Statehouse at the foot of center street, now the War Memorial building. By way of a reminder to the good citizens of Little Rock that there were more Bluecoats to follow, the eleventh Ohio battery, with 11-inch howitzers planted two guns on the north side of the river, opposite the foot of main street. Several shells were fired over the city, without damage. One of the shells fell at what is now twentieth street, but failed to explode.

The Federal army was commanded by Maj Gen Frederick Steele, his forces consisting of about 20,000 officers and men, General Sterling Price was in command of the Confederates, his total strength being about 1,500 officers and men. It was the latter part of August that General Steele advanced down the Mississippi river and up white to DeVall's Bluff, whence the army marched to Little Rock. When the Federal's entered Little Rock the city was enshrouded with dust, there having been no rain in this locality for several weeks.

It was said that the third Minnesota , which first entered Little Rock, had been engaged in more battles then any organization in Steele's command. Upon entering the war it mustered 1,200 officers and men. When it reached Little Rock it's full strength was about 600. Several members of the regiment remained in Arkansas after the command was mustered out of service. Of those there is one survivor, Capt. W.G. Akers, 2101 Chester Street.

After the capture of Little Rock, there was very little military activity in this locality. The Federals constructed Fort Steele south of the city on the site now occupied by the U.M.Rose School, and built earth entrenchments at several points about the city, and then went into winter quarters. The Confederates established their winter quarters on the Ouachita river near Camden.

The year closed in Arkansas with skirmishes near Huntsville November 9; Kingston, November 1o; Caddo Gap November 11; Jackson Port, November 13; Mount Ida. November13; Benton, December1; Princeton, December 8; Waldron, December 29..

VETERAN'S REUNION OCTOBER 11 AND 12
SEPTEMBER 14,1922

The twenty-ninth annual reunion and convention of the Arkansas division of the United Confederate Veterans will be held at the State War Memorial building October 11-12, it was announced by B.W. Green, Major General commanding , Monday.

The convention will assemble at 10 o'clock on the morning of October 11, for the opening business session, October 12. The members of the division will be the guests of the Sons of Confederate Veterans and the United Daughters of the Confederacy, at the Confederate Home. The Veterans will be transported to the home in automobiles and a barbecue dinner will be served, followed by a program for which distinguished speakers have been secured.

All camps not having paid annual dues must do so before October 1st, General Green announced, and delegates to the convention should be elected during September. Commanders of all camps in the division are asked to send to headquarters, prior to October 1, the names of comrades who have died since October 1, 1921. These names are wanted for the record and for memorial hour, which will be held at noon the first day of the convention, This order is imperative, General Green says, and must be obeyed, as it is part of the duty of the division members to remember and honor past members.

The general order, No 15, follows. "The commanding general announces that the 29th annual reunion and convention of the Arkansas Division, U.C. V. will be held in the City of Little Rock, October 11 and 12m 1922." The convention will assemble in the State War Memorial building at 10 a.m. October 11.

The following morning , the 12th, delegates will be taken in automobiles furnished by the Sons of the Confederate Veterans to the Soldiers Home, where the Daughters of the Confederacy will serve a barbecue to the Confederate Veterans and friends. There will be distinguished speakers.

The railroads have been requested to grant special rates to the veterans,. Commanders of the camps will send to headquarters prior to October 1, the names of deceased comrades who have died since October 1, 1921.

All camps not having paid annual dues must do so before October 1. To pay dues during the session of the convention causes confusion and waste of time. Camps will elect delegates during this month (September) By order, B.W. Green, Maj. Gen. Commanding, "Attest" Geo. Thornburg, Adjust General and Chief of Staff.

DANVILLE ENTERTAINS VETERANS AT REUNION
SEPTEMBER 14, 1916
Editor Post-Dispatch

The annual county reunion of confederate veterans at Danville last week was a pleasant affair, the good people of that hospitable little city caring for us in their homes free, and as usual doing everything possible to make our stay pleasant. There were present, I think, 59 veterans.

On the first day interesting talks were made by Judge T..D. Patton and E.H. Cheyne, and on the second day by Hon. T.C. McRae and Gov. Geo. W. Hays. Each address was quite interesting and thoroughly enjoyed by all present. There is much dissatisfaction among many of the veterans with the confederate pension law passed by the last legislature. Also the special pension of $100 each is allowed to nearly one hundred pensioners. It is inferred by these special acts that these pensioners could not make proof of service, hence sought this mode of getting on the pension roll. If such be the case it is very unjust to the worthy confederate soldiers , and also to the tax payers of Arkansas.

If a man cannot prove his service as the law directs he has no right to be put on the pension roll by special act. I hope the next legislature will repel all special pensions allowed. The same Legislature passed a law making it possible for any one who claimed to have served in the confederate Army to get on the pension roll. That law should be repeated. A Veteran

REV. S.S. KEY
November 12, 1936

The Rev. S.S. Key, 95 retired Methodist minister and a confederate veteran, died at his home in this city at 8.15 last Thursday night, November 12th 1936, after a brief illness. Brother Key was born near Memphis ,Tenn., January 15th ,1841, and was educated in the Memphis schools. He joined the confederate Army at Hermando, Miss. In 1862, and was wounded in battle at Murfreesboro,Tenn, being left on the battlefield for dead. After recovering he joined the Cavalry service, remaining in duty until the close of the war.

He moved to Arkansas in 1866 and taught school at Searcy. In the same year he was admitted to the ministry. For 41 years he served as pastor and presiding elder of Methodist churches in many places in the state. He was granted superannuate relations in 1907 and moved to his home in Dardanelle where he had lived the past 20 years.

He served as chaplain of the Arkansas senate in 1916 and was assistant chaplain general of the United Confederate Veterans in 1923. He attended many reunions, including the last reunion in Little Rock. He was one of the oldest knights Templar of the State., having been Knighted in Fort Smith in 1872..

He was married October 24, 1872 to Miss Mattie A. Reeves, who died in 1881. In 1883 he married Miss Jennie Reeves, 94, by whom he is survived. Alson surviving is one son, D.M. Key, of Dallas, Texas, two daughters, Mrs H.W. Moseley and Mrs. J.R. McAlister, of Little Rock; 13 grandchildren and nine great grandchildren.

Funeral services were held at the Methodist Church at 3 p.m. last Friday afternoon, the business houses being closed during the funeral hour. The service, beautiful and impressive, were conducted by the pastor , Rev. E.E. Stevenson, assisted by Rev. William Sherman, of Conway, and Rev. C.M. Reeves, of Little Rock Burial was in Brearley Cemetery. The Cornwell Funeral Home was in charge.

Brother Key was universally loved and venerated, and his long and noble life is a monument to his saintly Memory more enduring and more eloquent than any shaft of granite that loving hands might erect. The Post-Dispatch joins in extending to sorrowing relatives deep sympathy in their loss.

TAPS SOUNDED FOR COUNTY'S LAST MAN WHO WORE THE GRAY
JOHN A. MARCUM

Mr. John Arthur Marcum, aged 98 years, one of Arkansas` three remaining Confederate veterans, died at his home in Birta at 11.30 a.m. last Friday, May 25th, 1951.

Funeral services were conducted at the Birta Baptist Church at 2.00 o`clock Sunday, burial in charge of the Cornwell Funeral Home of Dardanelle, being in Birta Cemetery.

Mr Marcum was the last Confederate veteran residing in Yell County. He is survived by aged wife, Mary Marcum; two sons, Rev. Ivan Marcum, of Birta and James Marcum , of Ola. And one daughter, Mrs. Nellie Yates, of Alexander, La.

The death of Mr. Marcum leaves only 12 known confederates in the Nation, two of them living in Arkansas. They are John Greene Chisam, 100, of Ben Hur, Newton County, and William Laundermilk, of Jonesboro Only seven veterans of the Union Army are known to survive. Mr. Marcum was the youngest veteran on either side. It is hard to realize that of the mighty armies of the 60`s—nearly 4,000,000 men who wore the Gray and the Blue—only 19 are now alive.

December 21,1931

Montgomery,Ala. May 20,--The remnant of a gallent army that once followed Lee and Jackson, the United Confederate Veterans, will gather here in " The Cradle of the Confederacy' in June for their last reunion. Only a handfull, in camparison with the 600,000 men who wore the gray of the south in the sixties,remain. Of these, only 4,000 are expected to answer the muster, June 2nd t0 5th. This is the first time in the 41 years veterans of the confederate army have been holding annual reunions that they have come to this city so rich in traditions of "The lost cause" and where Jefferson Davis took the oath of Office as President of the United States of the Confederacy.

A six pointed brass star, each point representing one of the first six States to secede, marks the spot on the Capitol portico where Davis stood as William Y. Yancey, southern firebrand, administered the oath February 17,1861 It was from Montgomery that the order for the first gun to fire on Fort Sumter,S.C. was given. Here also Dan Emmett, young bandmaster, wrote the stirring southern battle song, Dixie", which was played for the first time as a march at Davis' inauguration.

While the city has grown with the passing of the years, the shrines sacred to the veterans have been preserved. In the first "White House" of the Confederacy the largest collection of Davis relics in existence is on display.

The reunion, however, will not be confined to sightseeing trips and reminiscences, as the state of Alabama has appropriated $50,000 to make this, announced as the last national gathering of the veterans, an enjoyable one for the heroes of the sixties and their wives. Will Rogers, humorist; Nancy Carrol, musical comedy and talkie star, and other entertainers of note have been engaged to amuse the veterans. Twenty bands, including the United States army band, have made reservations, and all of them know how to play "Dixie"

MR. W.B. NUNNELEY DEAD
4-3-1933

Many of the older residents of Dardanelle will learn with a pang of sorrow of the passing of Mr. W.B. Nunneley, aged about 85 years, who died at his home in Pomona,Calif. On April 3rd. SGT. OSCAR BATA WRITES FROM GERMANY
WORLD WAR II, 17 MAY 1945

The following splendid letter was received last week by Lewis A. Evans, local monument dealer, by whom Sergeant Bata was employed for a number of years.
Somewhere in Germany, April 30, 1945
Dear Mr. Lewis ;

Your nice and appreciated letters of April 11th and 12th came several days ago, and I was really glad to hear from you again, and to know that you are o.k.. I am still feeling well. Here the war is almost over in Europe, and I have been through eight months of it –all the way from the Holland border up here, almost within shouting distance of Berlin---and I haven't received one single scratch., for which I am very thankful and I've been through some of the toughest fighting there has been over here, breaking through all the fortifications of the Siegfried line, and the spear-heading of the attack from the Roer to the Rhine River, back in February.

The long jump from the Rhine up to where I now am was a Sunday School picnic, compared to what we went through last fall and winter. The last week of last November and the first week in Dec are two weeks I will never forget, even though they seem now as if they were only a bad dream, and particularly last Thanksgiving day, November 23, 1944. That was the worst day and night I ever experienced in my entire life. Man, it was hell itself. And still I came through it all in one piece! A lot of fellows call it luck—but not me. For it wasn't luck when so many others were maimed for life. I give full credit to the Lord, and he alone, for no one could have performed such miracles as I have seen in battle, other than some Supreme Being.

From all news accounts, organized resistance by the Germans has practically ceased. I don't look for a sudden ending of the mess, as it was in 1918, but the gradual disintegration of Germany as a Military power. However, that should not be too long in coming around.. In the past few weeks I have seen countless thousands of prisoners, and more countless thousands of liberated slave laborers. The conditions of the slave laborers is very pitiful. They are filthy, disease-ridden, and most of them are on the point of starvation. They are presenting a very serious and complicated problem for the Allied authorities—mostly due to the enormous number of them.

I just wish that the 4-F's (not the real4-f's but we call the draft dodgers that too) and those with chronic belly-achers back home could sit right where I am right now writing this letter and see the things that are right in front of my eyes. Then I know there would be a very radical change in their minds as to just what the score really is. I'll hush all this, for I know you will get tired of me blowing off, but it really burns me up to know how indifferent some people back home really are to this whole business.

The death of President Roosevelt was indeed a profound shock to the boys in the foxholes. Their biggest worry now is if their new commander-in-chief will be able to carry on and negotiate a lasting peace. We know the war will be carried to a successful conclusion, and we know who will win---but will we win the peace? We won the war in 1918, but we lacked one hell of a lot of winning the most important thing, and as a result, here we are today again winning the war against the very same enemy!

We are all 100% for Truman, and are hoping and praying he can carry out the principles Roosevelt fought for and died for. I learned of President Roosevelt 's passing in a most peculiar way. We were in the midst of the big push from the Rhine toward Berlin, and late one afternoon we ran into some stiff resistance. A bunch of Jerries were corned in a large woods and we went in after them. We wounded one in the arm and shoulder with our mortar fire and he came out of the woods into the open field where I had my mortar section set up and firing, waving a white handkerchief, the token of surrender. I let him come up to us, of course keeping him covered with our rifles. He was a bloody mess, but didn't seem to be seriously injured. In broken English he started telling us that President Roosevelt was dead,. Of course we didn't believe him. We thought it was some more propaganda that had been fed to the enemy,

This was two days after the President's death. A couple of days later I got hold of a newspaper and there in big Black headlines was the confirmation to the German prisoner's statement to us,"F..D.R. is Dead"—a heck of a way to learn of your commander- in-chief's death.

You were talking about what I would do after I am finally discharged. I don't have any idea yet what I will do, or where I will go. That all will have to be decided later. But I am ready to settle down for good some place. I have had my fill of traveling around---in fact, I am getting too old to be running here and there, can't take the hard knocks like I used to a few years ago.

Although hostilities appear to be almost at an end in Europe, there yet remains a still tougher and dirtier job to be taken care of in the Pacific. I have my fingers crossed, hoping I won't have to take any part in that campaign. As to whether I will go there, remain here in Germany in the army of Occupation, or return to the States to some camp and eventual discharge, I don't know. However, I sincerely hope it is the latter. But what ever the decision of the higher ups may be in my case, I will abide by it, and do my best to carry out my part of it. I feel obligated to my buddies who have paid the highest price of all trying to gain something which they will never enjoy, to carry on till I am properly relieved.

I'll close now, and here's hoping I can see you before the year 1945 in finished. Regards and best wishes. As ever, Oscar Bata

PRIVATE GERVIS ADNEY WRITES FROM GERMANY

THURSDAY, JULY 18, 1919

The following letter from Gervis Adney to mr. And Mrs. W.R. Hayden, of this city, will be read with interest by the many friends of the writer in Dardanelle where Gervis was born and reared.

Bitburg, Germany, June 10, 1919

Dear Uncle Will and Aunt Pearl.;

This leaves me well except a lame leg on which I am limping a little, caused by running into a Boche wagon. Have been in Bitburg since about the 15th of Mat. Bitburg is about 95 miles from Coblenz. Two weeks ago, I made a trip to Coblenz on a machine. It was a pleasant trip up there and back. Had no trouble with the machine and erverything went fine. I took the road up the Moselle river, and on this road one has a good view of the river and mountains all the way to Coblenz. I received two issues of the Post-Dispatch a few days ago, in which I read the news of the 42nd Division arriving in the United States, and Joe and Vernon Johnston were with it. I never heard that they were with the 42nd.

If I had I would have looked them up, for I have been around the 42nd several times. I also read of the Talk Private Mark Flater gave the folks at home, and it was very interesting I know.

Well it looks as though all the boys are getting back home except me. I think it is my time now, but I am willing to stay for the finishing touch. I see that the Germans are not wanting to sign the peace terms, so we still have a chance to see more fun. I have been in Europe 14 months, and am willing to stay 14 more if necessary to clean up. I am on M.F. duty now, but if war starts again I'll go back to the tanks "toot sweet" (very quick).

How is everything back home? I don't get the paper often enough to keep up with you all. How is the Pontoon Bridge holding out this year, or has it gone out as it usually does? My regards to Mr. Keilch.

How many are attending Church and Sunday school now? Lots, I hope. I think Nettie Frances part in the graduating program was very good, and several of the boys in my company read and passed good compliments on it. With Love and kindest regards to all, I will close, Yours Truly, Pvt. Gervis J. Adney

March 26, 1918

The following interesting letter was written by Allan Ross, "Somewhere in France" to his father, Jno. A, Ross, at Harlowton, Montana. Jno..A. Ross, was for many years a prominent citizen of Dardanelle and his son , Allan, was born here.

A.P.O. 726, France, March 26, 1918

Dear Father,

The package containing cigarettes and tobacco arrived today and was gladly received, for it caught me just about half out. Ethel's package has not yet reached me, but I suppose it will when I least expect it. Am alone in the garage office tonight and everything is unusually quite, so I am taking this chance to write. Everything is in a bubbub and noisy rush during the day and at night there is so much doing. Of course we work day and night but it is much quieter after dark,

I know there are lots of things you would like to know that are going on over here, but the most interesting things are barred from our letters, even at that , I don't know so much about the war part of it for. I haven't been to the front yet and don't expect to be there very soon.

Wish you could see some of the places I have been since I landed. A uniform has carried me lots of places that a tourist never goes. Have visited Old Chateaus and quaint little villages and have toured quite a bit of this portion of France in a Ford.

You can tell Jake Karnop and Ward Beley that Henry Ford is well represented in this country and on the radiators of his ambulances is "made in the U.S.A". The automobile roads are wonderful. Have traveled mile after mile on roads as smooth as asphalt pavement, which were lined on either side by beautiful trees. The curves rounded off nicely and the roads wind through field after field and in and out of odd little villages with their queer little stone houses.

Every now and then one will pass a string of high-wheeled carts, sometimes three or four in a bunch. They have only two wheels and one horse. Nine out of ten are carrying huge casks of wine. One then does not wonder at the number of vinyards he passes. The French are great for their wine and it is very cheap.

This portion of France is untouched by the ravages of the Hun except in the hearts of those families who have lost members at the front. I sincerely hope that we can bring this war to an early close so that we can come home and better appreciate the wonderful country in which we live. One only has to travel through these countries to realize just how far ahead of the balance of the world the United States really is. It does not seem hardly possible that it can be so. France may have its "Parisian Styles" but it takes the American women to wear them to the best advantage. Of course there are many pretty women in France but I prefer the Yankee girls myself.

My best regards to all my friends and lots of love to you. Hoping to hear from you again real soon and thanking you a thousand times for the tobacco, I am Yours, Allan.

NOVEMBER 16, 1915

Editor P-D.----Sixty-three Yell County ex-confederate Veterans enjoyed the lavish hospitality of the citizens of Danville at the annual county reunion last week. The oldest veteran present was G.L. Johnson, aged 85, and the youngest was W.J. Parks, aged 67. The annual memorial service, at which I as Chaplain preached the memorial service, brought many touching memories to mind, it being just 50 years since I first rode into Danville on my army horse, an ex-confederate soldier, but a full-fledged Methodist Circuit Rider. I preached the first sermon of my life in the old county court house there one rainy Thursday night, using the Judge's stand as a pulpit. I still have the old army saddle that I rode on that occasion.-----S.S. Key

WORLD WAR 11
JUNE 28,1945
POST-DISPATCH
SGT, CORNWELL TELLS OF NAZI V-BOMBINGS

The following interesting letter from Sgt. Gilbert Cornwell has been received by his sister, Mrs. George Phillups. Sergeant Cornwell's company is doing the same thing since the surrender that it did before—pumping gasoline ---but, as he said in another letter; they are pumping more gas now than they did before the German's quit. Gilbert has 85 points, but says he does not expect to return soon, as men with the most points are discharged first.

Sergeant Cornwell is a son of Mrs. T.R. Cornwell and a twin brother of Dr. Gilroy Cornwell. His wife and small son are spending the summer here.

Antwerp. Belgium, June 5, 1945

Dear Reba, I would like to read the write-up about Antwerp in "Time" magazine of March 26th to see what they had to say, but from what you write, they must have given rather a clear picture of what took place. Yes. We were right in the middle of it, sitting in the hot seat for a little better than four months. You were right in your guessing about the oil tanks. I was sleeping only thirty yards from a big tank filled with gasoline, and had it been hit by either a V-1 or V2 I would never have known it. That's'the attitude we took, because otherwise we all would have been total wrecks. And really that was the main purpose of the V-bombs—to upset morale. Now don't get the idea they aren't deadly, because they are. They will flatten a whole block and kill anyone within a radius of 100 yards or more.

There were certain hours the Germans would send over more V-bombs, We always knew just about when to expect them to come over in conveys. About eight o'clock they were heavy, then we could always expect "Bedcheck Charley" over at eleven; and they were very thick around six in the morning. I have seen them come over every three minutes for a one-hour stretch, then thin out for a bit. I've seem them come over in "conveys," six at a time, There were always lots of them over on foggy nights, because the ack-ack boys were almost helpless then. On a clear night the "ack-ack gunners would knock down a good sixty percent of them, and I'll always say those boys really saved Antwerp, as well as our lives. I question very much whether we could have stayed there had it not been for them. Those "Ack-Ack" boys in Antwerp were the best they had—every one an expert. Any time a single V-1 came over on a clear night you could pretty well bet they would knock it out of the sky. I'll always say those boys were from Arkansas—or maybe from Kentucky---by the way they could shoot! I'll say I didn't mind the V-bombs too much in the day time, but it was hell after dark. While we were lying in bed at night we could hear the "Ack-Ack" boys shouting, and we knew that if the V-1's got through (and they usually did on a cloudy nights) they would be over in one minute more. If we were all awake you could hear the fellows, one after another, sighing or drawing a deep breath, and finally one of us would say, "here comes one!".

They have an awful vibration while they are passing over, the house would vibrate and sound as if everything were falling in. That's when you live an eternity in a few minutes. There was another time when we were just as worried, when the motor of the V-Bombs cuts off. The motor stops when the gas is used up, they they fall. It just takes two seconds then for them to land, and believe me, those are the longest two seconds I have ever gone through! I have seen boys lose their speech, and it would be at least ten minutes before they could say a word without stammering,

I know you would like to know more about how many were killed during the blitz, but we are not permitted to say. I can say, however, that our company was fortunate. You were wandering what happened to the fellow who received the Purple Heart while I was talking to him. Well, the truth is we were both hit too close to a V-2 when it came down. I was knocked to my knees, but not a scratch! I was also knocked to my knees by a V-1 the day before, but again not a scratch. Yes I was very fortunate. I've seen the time when if I'd been five minutes sooner or later it would have been too bad.! Really, I don't want this letter to sound too bad, but that's just the way it's been for four months.

It was a relief to get out from under the constant pressure of listening for V-1's always on the alert, day and night. After being under such a condition for any length of time, you seem to forget the seriousness of it until you are relieved, then you realize what you have been through. Well, I haven't talked about anything but war in this letter, but you know me, I never say anything that will upset Dot and Mama. I received your letter about why I should be a good boy in the army, and I think you have something there. I found three good German shotguns last week, also a set of silverware, but we're not allowed to send them home.

AN INTERESTING LETTER FROM PRIVATE BILL DAWSON, U.S.A.

December 5, 1918

Camp Upton,N.Y.
Mr. George Upton,
Dardanelle,Ark

Dear Sir,

I promised to write to the P-D, when I went to France but Germany has surrendered and my Company will not fet to go, so I will write about my trip from Camp Merritt, New Jersey , to Camp Upton here on Long Island.. We got our orders at Camp Merritt on Sunday evening to roll our packs,that we were going to leave to go overseas that night. So we ate a midnight supper, then marched about 6 miles to the river and were loaded onto a big steamboat and carried 8 miles down to New York Harbor and loaded onto an English transport named "The empress of Britain". I enjoyed that trip because I saw some beautiful sights, even if it were in the night. We could see the lights of New York City and the lights of the big boats as they went up and down the harbor and it was a beautiful sight to me.

I saw 7 of the big U.S. battleships taking on coal. Then I saw the transports of 5 different nations. The battleships and transports are painted blue and white striped like a zebra so the enemy cannot see them so easily when they are at sea. When we were taken off the boat we were tired from the march we had taken, but the Red Cross nurses were at the wharf to serve us with hot coffee and buns, and then they gave us stationery and tobacco and we surely appreciated this.

The ship we were on had about 1,000 Red Cross nurses and about 2,000 soldiers on board, and we were ready to go to Europe but the Germans surrendered so we, the Infantry , got orders to unload for we were not going. We boys will never forget the 24 hours we were on that ship. We were so crowded that we could hardly get anything to eat or a place to sleep. I made friends with an English sailor and he diveded his meals with me which consisted of light bread, tea, potatoes, carrots and roast horse meat.

After we left the ship we got on naother big boat and went around lower New York City and by the Statue of Liberty, then back up the river and under the Brooklyn and other beautiful bridges and then landed on Long Island. On the trip I saw all those beautiful buildings in lower New York or "The New York Sky Line," and on the other side of us was the beautiful Statute of Liberty, and as we boys looked looked upon this beautiful scenery it made us feel proud of our country and want to do all in our power to defend it, and we said, "No wonder Germany is jealous of us".

When we landed on Long Island we were tired and hungry but the Red Cross nurses were right there to serve us with hot coffee and sauage and bread, and to give us a word of encouragement. We were than loaded on a train and came to Camp Upton which is 60 miles from New York City. Camp Upyon is a large camp and has fine drill grounds. Long Island is about 100 miles long and is 24 miles wide as its widest part. There are some beautiful cities on Long Island and I have been told that the best grade of Irish potatoes in the U.S. are raised on Lonf Island. Potatoes are their principal crop here.

Camp Merritt, New Jersey, was the most beautiful and best built camp I have ever seen, but I like Camp Upton fine. The Officers gave us passes to go to New York City on Saturdays and Sundays. Our Lieutenant gave nine of us a 36-hour pass the night before Thanksgiving, So we hired a Ford auto and went to Pachogue, a City of 8,000 inhabitants, and near "The Great South Bay," I attended the Thanksgiving service at the Congregational Church. I heard a fine sermon and some fine music and singing.
Then we went to "Smith's Point", and here we could get a beautiful view of the Atlantic Ocean. It was a great sight to we boys to see the big clear waves of water come rolling into the beach. We found some pretty rocks and shells to bring back with us. We got back to camp for dinner, and we had chicken and dressing, sweet potatoes, cranberry Jam, biscuits, and many other good things to eat.

We are having a great time here on Long Island. We see the aviators most every day. They fly over camp and show us how well they can drive their machines by turning somersaults and getting the plane in most every kind of shape. Then we had a big horse show here, and it was great to see the cavalry horses in a parade and to see them drill. The horses know the commands most as well as some of the boys. There were two regimental brass bands there to make music, and they had mule races and riding contests, and there were several silver cups given away to the prize winners. I wish the people of Yell County, A Merry Christmas. Best wishes to you and all the P-D. Bill Dawson

JAMES LYNCH WRITES OF ACTION IN KOREA
JANUARY 11,1951

Following is an excerpt from a letter received from James A. Lynch, son of Mr. And Mrs. Lester Lynch, of Dardanelle. The letter was written before Christmas. James volunteer for the U.S. Navy July 25,1950. He left San Francisco October 30th. November 20th he landed in Rokosuke, Japan, and was there about a week and then assigned to a landing ship tanks the 1st of December. The 2nd of December he was on his way to Korea. On the 7th of December he was in Inchon, Korea, and being in the Amphib Forces he helped evacuate Marines,, and also helped evacuate refugees from Seoul. James became 18 years of age while on the trip to Korea. Part of one letter read:

Iachon, Korea, Dec.25,1950

Dearest Mama and Daddy,

Well here it is Christmas and we have been working ever since 4.00 o'clock this morning. We took on a load of refugees and took them out to other ships, which will take them to Pusan. I guess it's a good present for them even though we are working. They are leaving by the thousands. We had 2,ooo on board this morning. I feel sorry for them. Many are starving and freezing and being separated from the rest of their family sometimes and will probably never see them again.

We had very little Christmas candy but I gave all I had to some of the children. They were kids—not 3 years old and carrying bundles that weighed twice as much as they do. They had no shoes or coats and were freezing to death. It makes me proud that the war is over here instead of near America.

On way back to Inchon.

Dearest Mama and Daddy,

Well, we saw a little action last night. Somewhere here on the coast up North we were assigned to evacuate some Marines. We picked up a destroyer excort and went to a place called point 675. We went into the beach and the destroyer stayed out in deeper waters because she couldn't come in as shallow as we can. We can get right in on the beach. We could hear heavy artillery fire about 10 miles away. We were there about an hour when the marines came to get aboard.

There were about 200 of them. The communista were right behind them and they caught up with them just as the last of them were getting aboard. Machine gun fire completely cut two of the marines in two. We got fired at by mortar fire, but none of them hit the ship. The Destroyer , couldn't fire back because they were to close to us and they might it us. The bullets got pretty close to me and I was so scared , I didn't know what to do. We fired back at them on the beach. I saw a few of them but, not very many. Machine gun bullets hit and riddled across our deck about twenty feet from my gun turret.

One of the boys on my gun crew passed out and that made that much more for us to do. I am on the front of the ship at general quarters anyway, and I never will forget those marines laying there on the beach and us going out. I didn't have much time to look at them though, The gunner on my gun shot several of the enemy. The explosives in the shells got a few, too. Our gun is a 20mm.

After we got away from the beach the destroyer completely tore the beach up with heavy gun fire. The Captain, is going to get a medal for our ship. One of our crew got hit in the side but it just grazed him, It cut his belt and got a little hide.but he will get the Purple Heart for it.

I don't want you to worry about me, because we may evacuate once more and then I expect we will go back to Japan as our ship needs some work done on it. I hope we will be releived by another ship and can come back to the States. I have seen enough to do me I think. I shouldn't tell you all this because I know you will worry but there's no need to. I'm as happy here as I have ever been. I hope you have a good Christmas. Have to write another letter now. Lots of Love, James

THEIR SERVICE NOT FORGOTTEN
POST DISPATCH AUGUST 16,1973
HUGH WESLEY DID NOT FORGET

An American Flag on the grave of every man who served in any War, from the Civil War through the war in Vietnam, is the goal of a Dardanelle native who has lived here most of his 72 years. It started last year when he purchased a flag to put on the grave of a relative; now more than 80 graves are marked like the on pictured.

Hugh Wesley has carried his project on alone except for the help Linsey Carter, Miss Octa Vaughn and Mrs George Upton,Sr who have helped him identify the servicemen buried in Brearley Cemetery. Mr. Wesley was born in a log cabin "like Abraham Lincoln" he says jokinhly, teo and a half miles west of Dardanelle. His father, Will Wesley, died in 1910, a short time before his fifth son in the family was born. Except for 12 years in Kansas, Hugh Wesley has lived here, most of the time engaged in farming. He was to young for the draft but served in the home guard during World War 1. At the time of World War 11 he was with Company H at a Texas Camp, but was discharged when a series of serious illnesses in his family made his presence at home necessary.

Mr. Wesley feels strongly about his project and would like to see it carried on ,"even if I am not here to do it myself,"he says,"Iam already living on borrowed time and would like to see some group here take the project up. Prehaps others will like the idea and it will spread state-wide...many, of course will never know the Old Glory is flying over their graves, but those who are among the living will know that they are not forgotten.....When I come to the grave of a soldier who was killed in action or died from wounds I pause and think of what he gave up. Like a bud that just came into full bloom he was cut down.

"Those who were lucky came back alive, but many people never think what they went through. As Sherman said "War is Hell" If the grave of any serviceman who is buried in Brearley Cemetery has been overlooked please call Miss Octa Vaughn, The Cornwell Funeral Home or the Post –Dispatch.

INTERESTING LETTER FROM MARK H. FLATER
5 SEPTEMBER 1918

The following interesting letter from Mark Flater, now serving his country in the Field Artillery in the battle line in France, was received last week by his mother, Mrs. A.A. Flater.

Somewhere in France, Aug.9,1918
Dear Mama---
Haven't written in some time, but I just haven't had the time. Have been in a big drive. We've got the Huns on the run and, believe me, it is some job to keep in range of them for our infantry sure has them going. Have seen lots of of dead Germans the last week, and lots of towns that have been ruined by artillery fire. Don't think the war will last much longer. I saw them bring in some German prisoners today. The Boches look as though they had not been having any too much to eat, and their clothes are bad.

Met Coy Gateley and several of the boys from Beauregard recently, but, didn't get to see Charmel (Lemoyne). Papa asked in his last letter what I was doing. Tell him that I am on a gun crew and like it fine. The gun we use is a very fine weapon, the best made. We can fire from 17to 20 shots per minute.

Did you have many peaches this year? Tell Lady I haven't forgotten her and will write just as soon as I have time. Please excuse writing, but I can't do better in the present surroundings and noise. Must close. Will write as often as possible. Don't worry about me for I am all O.K. with lots of love, Your loving son, M.H. Flater, Battery B, 147 F.A.A.E.F.

The Military Department, and Thomas Cox, with Al Chicerter as assistant, was Marshall of the Day. Chaptain Branch Martin, with a military escort, had charge of the casket containing the remains of the gallant soldier. The beautiful service of the masons was conducted at the grave, after which a platoon of regulars fired three volley's over the grave of their dead conrade, the bugler sounded "Taps" and the solemn ceremony was concluded.

It was perhaps the largest concorse of people ever assembled at a funeral in Dardanelle. Lieut. Davis was beloved by every rank and class of people with whom in life he had been associated. The universal love and esteem with which he was regarded by his associates during this temporary sojurn, we trust and believe, Is the index of what his reception will be in the vale beyond the gates, the passing of which converts, mortality into immortality.

FIRST ARKANSAS MOUNTED RIFLES

A local company was formed at Clarksville, Johnson, County in the latter days of May 1861, which numbered 120 men. They departed Clarksville on 3 june 1861 for Ft. Smith, where thet were mustered into service on 6 june 1861, under the command of Captain Basham and were to know thereafter as Company "C", 1st Arkansas Mounted rifles.

After outfitting and drill instructions for about three weeks this unit became a part of a division of about 10,000 men under the command of Brigadier General Benjamin McCulloch. Leaving Ft Smith they were to participate in their first akirmiah at First Creek, Missouri. That this enagement was a success is shown by their advancement and seecond engagement at Neosho, Missouri, here a diary was kept by Johnathan Taylor, a Clarksville native mentions the capture of some 126 prisoners. Here at Neosho, for the first time in her brilliant record was the first Arkansas to go as a reinforcement for Brigadier General Sterling Price of Missouri and his State Guard. Immediately afterward under the command of Price an attack was made .upon Carthage, Missouri. Near this town her men were to take part in their first night attack at the Battle of Pond Springs which occurred on 9th of August 1861.

Further sucesses under Genersl Price were gained the next day at Wilson Creek. Here the discernsion between Missouri and Arkansas commanders caused a separation of Troops fo the states concerned. After Wilson Creek Little activity took place other than an occasional scouting and foraging party, until in December. Sometimes during December, Company "C" returned to Clarksville where they took up winter quarters.

On 26th February 1862 , this unit still under General McCulloch started for the vicinity of Pea Ridge, again to reinforce General Price. Reinforcements from the Five Civilized Tribes from Indian Territory, brought Confederate forces to about 12,000 men now under the new Comannd of General Van Dorn, a career soldier and West point regular.

On 4th March 1862 the Arkansas First moved out early in a surprise movement which saw them through Fayetteville and on into Elm Springs, under cold weather and snow conditions. Here weary from seachering and poor weather they were to be delayed intil Northern forces were safely out of Bentonville

Felled trees and other obstacles in the few roads futher delayed their movement as they preceeded along the Bentonville Detour. Oppsoition along this route was by Iowa's Fourth Infantry. By traveling along this road it was intended that an attack be made on General Curtis rear, however the elements of surprise had been lost and daylight of 7th March 1862 found them short of their main objective. At this time orders for a counter march were received with Leetown , to their south and east as objective. Now that the march of order had been reversed, Indian troops under General Albert Pike was soon to meet and engage Col. Oa\sterhaus' 1st union division made up of Calvery, light Artillery and Infantry..

Here in the open fields around Leetown the Indians had become excited and had charged Federal Lines surprising and routing the emeny with such a furious charge that what equipmeny not worn was left on the field as bounty. Pikes Indians got so completely out of hand that orders were ignored. So completely were the Indians Indians confused that had it not been for elements of Arkansas First Mounted Rifles making charge after charge on their left to drive back counter attacks by a Union regiment brought up to reinforce Osterhana defeated division. During these charges General McCulloch was to be killed and his 2nd in command fatally wounded, thus leaving our men leaderless and confused.

Upon learning of this intelligence General Pike assumed command and withdrew his remnants into the lines drawn up by Van Dorn. So completely shattered were men of the First Mounted Rifles that not until early on the morning of 8th March 1862 were remnants able to enter Confederate lines for action. Most of these same men had been without food for two days and water for s day. Added to this discomfort was the knowledge that ammonition could not be requisitioned and no other means og getting fresf supplies were available.

It was therefore understandable that action of Saturday morning, 8th March was shory but decisive. All along the entire front Federal troops pushed forward. In less than two hours fighting had stopped with the First Arkansas Mounted Rifles falling back to Van Buren and a continous with drawal to near Clarksville, Arkansas. Here being back in familiar surroundings and friendly neighbors wounded and sick were allowed time to recouperate. Rested and fed another Cavalry raid aimed at Springfield, Missouri Via Walnut Creek began. Upon reaching Forsythe, Missouri, orders were received in return to Des Arc, Arkansas by way of Clinton.

Upon reaching Des Arc, troops dismounted and loaded into boats for Memphis, Tenn. From Memphis travel being by rail to Corinth, Mississippi., they arrived to take part in the final withdrawal of defeated foot soldiers fresh from the Shiloh Battle field. Helping fortify Corinth they were almost daily to participate in skirmishes for the next 60 days. A diary kept by Johnathan Taylor states that an engagement was fought at Farmington, Mississippi, and a withdrawal executed. Since Corinth was to be besieged starting 28th April by Northern General Halleck with 100,000 Men from the direction of Shiloh, it may have been that the 1st Arkansas was put into Confederate Lines to slow down the impending siege of Corinth. Farmongton being about 5 miles from Corinth and the hub of several roads leading into the city saw heavy movements by both armies.

So superior in numbers and supplies were Yankee armies that Cornith was held until 30th may 1862 and then completely evacuated with great skill and srrict secrecy. Supplies and Ordance preced troops by rail some 50 miles to Tupelo, Mississippi. Much credit is deserved by General Bureguard who was later to be known as " Little Napoleon in Gray", because of Goulic ancestry.

Here fortunately Northern Generals were satisfied with Local Successes around Corinth and started scattering troops to Garrison Local settlements which later proved of little importance.

After staying in Tupelo,Mississippi about 30 days the unit went by train to Mobile, Alabama, where they crossed the Bay of Tensaw Landing. Taking cars again they were to pass through Montgomery, and may have remained here for about 2 weeks. Again the diary leaves the impression that movement was without point, and gives an impressiom of slow or uncertian movement across Georgia as far as Atlanta. From Alanta movement was to London, Tenn. by way of Chatanooge. Now under command of General Kirby Smith, it was to be a part of the army of Tennessee, whose mission was to relieve pressure from middle Tennessee, and to hold the all inportant rail commications center of Chatanoohe. Leaving London,Tennessee (the command of General Smith's army was at Tulehoma,Tennessee) they were to travel by way of Knoxville into kentucky. Taking a line of march from Knoxville to Barboursville, Kentucky in rear of Cumberland Cap, they were to remain until 30th August 1862.

Movement at this time was by horse due to the rapidity of changing stations. On 30th August 1862 the battle of Richmond, kentucky took place, where the unit was now a part of Churchills's Brigade and under direct command of Col G.V. Gowan. During and after this battle some 6500 prisoners were taken.

On September 2nd, 1862 movemnebt had placed them in Lexington, Kentucky, where they were enjoying large quantities of supplies left by hastily tretreating enemy troops. Here at Lexington, one writer states that shoes which were always short in supply by Confederates were taken in Large quantities. So rapidly were the movements of the Army of Tennessee, that troops had to depend entirely upon captured stores and favored Blue Grass terrain for their subsistance. From Lexington, the Arkansas Calvary moved eastward to Mt. Sterling, thence North to Covington, where the diary makes a note that they stayed for sometime, raiding and burning bridges. This development started after September 2nd 1862 and covered about 35 miles to Mt. Sterling and roughly a distance of 112 miles into Covington. Extended supply lines caused the Confederacy to refuse heavy pitched battles, as General Kirby Smith realized that success depended on fighting at the right place and right time.

Pressure from Northern forces now command by George H. Thomas, caused Smith's Division to seek a union with General Bragg who commanding the Western prong of the drive through Tennessee and into kentucky. Withdrawal was by way of the South East., troops of the 1st Arkansas were next to occupy Georgetown and move Westward where they joined General Bragg at Harrodsborough, Kentucky. Movement of this type placed Confederate forces along a line roughly 60 miles long extending from the Kentucky river opposite Frankfort on the North East of Bardstown on the Southwest.

Buell with a largely superior force was advancing along four rough narrow roads in close pursuit of General Smith's Calvary. On 8th October 1862 the battle of Perryville, Kentucky took place. Since the entire Blue Grass area was in the troos of a drough, the immediate objective of Confederate forces were the pools of water in the Chaplin River. Drough conditions had prevailed for weeks leaving a parched region where even not enough drinking water could be found.

So important was the pending battle that reinforcements described as "Two Good Divisions" were dispatched to reinforce General Smith. Evidence indicates that the 1st Arkansas remained under the command of General Bragg during this engagement. Bragg's army now numbered about 15.000 men. Tactically Perryville was a confederate victory. Buell's Army on the field and nearby numbered more than 50,000. Three corps of Federal troops were directly engaged in the vicinity without success. Fighting was desperate and close. Loss of life on both sides was heavy and at the end of the day fight confederate Forces retained possession of the river bed. Northern forces that had occupied the right bank on that morning were driven back.

Weakened by the Wear of War and knowing no replacements were to be expected, Confederat Troops could not hild their temporaty success. Forces under Smith and Bragg were drawn back to Harrodsburgh some 8 miles east of Perryville. There they waited two days for an expected attack which never developed. A general retreat began on 10th December 1862 toward east tennessee, where vast quantities of supplies were carried with them. So large were these provisions that movement created a major problem over difficult mountain roads and unfriendly partisans. Adding to the misery of retreat a 20 inch snow fell on 10 October 1862 at Harrodsburgh. So slow was movement that at times no more than 5 miles a day was made. Once again Arkansas Troops were to be forced to dismount and fight the enemy from rock walls, ditiches or drive them back by counter charges. After about two weeks pursuit halted and the retreat continued will less effort.

This was a disillusioned an disheartened force that withdrew back to Tennessee. Bragg was now their Commander and the Regiment had hoped for continued success after it's first triumpths. Their march being South East of the Cumberland Mountains where they helpedto occupy about two thirds of Middle Tennessee with Nashville being the exception.

Winter Quarters were had at Shelbyville, Tennessee where the unit saw little activity until Spring of 1863. General Bragg was replaced by Old Joseph E. Jphnson, who had recovered from wounds suffered at the battle of Seven Pines, near Richmand. In early spring the regiment now moved slowly toward Vicksburg, which was soon to be under siege, by the combined efforts of Generals Grant and Sheridan. There is no evidence of the 1st Arkansas having entered the besieged city, however they were engaged at the Battle of Big Black, in the defense of a Railroad Bridge across the Big Black Rife. Being defeated here they were to withdraw toward Jackson, Mississippi. and to evacuate that position on 14th May 1863. Fighting here was not hotly contested or a long drawn out affair, Vicksburgh was the objective and Heneral Johnson, had neighter supplies or me in strength to committ his army to nothing other than harassing skirmishes in central Mississippi.

Movemnet again was toward east Mississippi, and the 1st was to occupy Morton, Mississippi, where they watched the siege and subsequent fall of Vicksburgh. During the last days of June they were to again move westward to Blandon, Mississippi, where they hoped to take up winter quarters. Following the disaster of Vicksburgh they were to move into Meridian where they were to remain for quite a long time. Evidence indicates that the 1st was now foot soldiers as Johnson had relieved inactive units of equipment and cavalry to furnish General Forrest who was operating futher north. General Forrest was planning the battle of Inlea and had as its purpose to drive on to Memphis where northern armies had stored large quantities of food and clothing. Battle Plans called for much needed reinforcements for such a move and again the 1st was sent north this time by rail. Arriving too late to participate in the battle of Inlea. They again returned to Meridian and from there went to Ringold, Georgia to reinforce General Bragg who was soon to lead them at the battle of Chickamaga on 19-21 September 1863, with terrible losses. Advancing north down the narrow Chickamaga the 1st was to meet and engage Veterans from Northern General Thomas' Corps of 3 Divisions.

They were still a part of Forrest Cavalry operating on the right of General Polk's Corps. On 21st September 1863 they were to cross Missionary Ridge, meanwhile their losses were so severe that they were asked to do little but picket duty. Finally from Chickamaga movement was toward Atlanta where they were to return by train to Blandan, Mississippi, for a rest. Sherman keeping pressure on the Ridge, caused an early return of the 1st Arkansas and on 22nd November 1863 broke through confederate lines to keep pressing their initial success. But of an Arkansas Brigade of which the 1st was a part thrown into a gap battle for the Ridge would have become a disaster. Col.D.C. Gowan led them into the gap, where under direction of General G.W. Colquitte, two small guns were brought to bear on a widening gap. Finally when musketry failed they used clubbed guns, Pistols ans rocks, (here Sgt. Taylor wab wounded in the hip) only to be driven back in the viciinity of Dalton, Georgia. Constant pressure caused a gradual retreat into the Altoona Pass vis Ressace,Calhaun, Adirsville and Kingston, Kennesaw Mountain. From Dalton to a slight pause before Kennesaw Mountian had lasted just a month. Here Union Forces waited for three weeks before making an attack on the flank and slopes of Kennesaw to be repulsed with such severe losses. (Mr. Taylor states that 1st Arkansas losses were little). Durnig this engagement brush and grass caught fire and threatened to burn fallen men unable to move from their wounds. Here Lt. Col. W.H. Martin of the 1st Arkansas was to leave his safe position to ezpose himself, wave a handerchief on a ramrod and declare a quick informal truce. Col. Martin declared, "Get those wounded men away from the fire, we want fire a shot till you do. Be quick". Mr. Taylor's diary indicates that Arkansas men left their lines to help move men thay had been responsible for wounding.

On 22nd July 1864 we fought the Battle of Atlanta, wrote young Taylor, here on Peach Tree Creek was a heavy engagement, he stated, and so envolved that each man was forced to act on his own. Appearently control of the unit being lost for a time. Fighting was heaviest and losses severe, he wrote. During this engagement General Hood was too succeed General Joseph Johnson as Commander of the Army of Tennessee. Arkansas troops next engagement of note was at Jonesboro, where on 31st August their effortssesulted in faillure and ended any hope of saving Atlanta. A General retreat started on 2nd September along the Memphis and Charleston Railroad. Federal Calvary operated at top efficiency in and around Atlanta, so that our men were to be kept on the defense for over a month.

Now under the command of Little Joe Wheeler, the regiment on 30th October, was to move around Shermans outpost to the left of Renessa and attack North toward Dalton, Georgia. Operations and serious fatique conditions forced Confederate troops to little activity, while Sherman was coordinating his supply and Communications centers. Wheeler had no other course than to gradually withdraw to the general vivinty of Atlanta.

Never able to muster enough men to attack. Nothing remained to do but wait for Sherman to extend his drive toward Savanah and the Atlantic to except harassing actions of minor proportions. From Atlanta this unit was next to appear at Augusta, Georgia with the purpose of heading Sherman from Columbia, South Carolina. Traveling overland by worn out horses and not enough of them, Mr. Taylor well remembered seeing smoke rising from the burning buildings of that old city when within 9 miles away and realised another of what was now a continous string of bitter defeats.

Turning north across open country they were to cut a railroad line within 5 miles of Columbia, take cars enough to travel by, to Kingston, South Carolina and leave the tracks destroyed to prevent pursuit. Near Bentonville, North Carolina, and under their old commander Uncle Joseph Johnson, they were to engage a hotly pursueing enemy. Our writer comments that at Bentonville, there never was a line of battle with so much rank and so little file. Meaning that Generals and Colonels once commanding divisions and regiments had nothing left with which to fight, Officers who once commanded thousands of men now had less than a hundred. Fighting lasted three days with Sherdian marching on to Goldsboro, North Carolina, with more than 80,000. The next lines seem to portray a kind of fighting spirit that carried on even when defeat was ineventabke as Mr. Taylor's diary notes then read, "We surrounded Sheridan there, with about 20,000 men".

Further diary notes explain food conditions "rations were so short that half ration of one half pound of meat and a handful of meal were looked uopn as a feast and a small rations meaning vrgetables were just as serious. Here at Goldsboro, North Carolina, News of General Lee's surrender reached , General Johnson, who was wishing to surrender moved his command to Jamestown, North Carolina, where a formal surrender occurred 25th April 1865. Here Mr.Taylor write that Southern forces were 45,000, a figure which differs by official records that show about 20,000 men were actually involved.

Whether as per agreement by opposing Armies or by chance the great review of a lost cause was conducted by Uncle Joe Johnson near Jamestown. Regiments that had once numbered over a thousand souls could not muster a hundred and sometimes as little as fifty for roll call. Proud colors and standards in many instances had lost their identity by tare and stain, even Regimental and State numbers had long been unidentifiable. The same was true of clothing and old as old and young paraded, cavalty boots, Engineer and Artillery braid made on difference to an Infantryman, units so lost their identity that observers could not identify the various branches of service. That this review had its sympathetic observers is shown by other diary remarks, " young girls and mothers often brought pitchers of water and food out to us as we marched by".

From Jamestown, North Carolin, our Regiment next marched to Greenville, Tennessee, where its arms and artillery were turned in as spoils for the victor. Leaving Greenville, Tennessee , by train, travel by train begin for Nashville, Tennessee. When within 12 miles of Knoxville, a wreck occurred with several being injured. All injured members remained in a Federal Hospital while the remainder again took train for Nashville. Travel this time was by river boat via Paducah, Kentucky, and Cario, Illinous to Memphis, Tennessee. Arriving at Memphis in early July, travel was delayed several days. Finally boat transportation was arranged for Spadra Bluff, where ended a final chapter in a never to be forgotten cause on 12th Jvly 1865, as each man walked toward what had once been his home.

COMPANY 'H' FIRST ARKANSAS

MOUNTED RIFLES

BY DR. ROBERT H. DACUS

DARDANELLE, ARKANSAS,

AUGUST 1ST, 1897

CHAPTER 1.

This company was made up in the spring of 1861, by T.J. Daniels, who was elected Captain of the company. It was the first company from this county, and as companies were not lettered at that time (or rather they were not known by their numbers), it was known as Daniels' Company and Churchill's Regiment, and is better known, or remembered, by many of the citizens as Daniels' old Company and Churchill's old Regiment than by number.

The company went first to Mazzard Prairie, near Fort Smith, where they remained for some time, drilling and getting ready for active service, little dreaming of the part they were to take in the bloodshed and carnage that the next four years were to bring fourth. At that time all were eager for the command to go forward, fearing the war might end before they has an opportunity of showing to the world their fighting Qualities. But alas! Subsequent events and the few who were left at the final roll call to tell of the chivalry and valorous deeds of their comrades who had laid down their lives during those four years of the most bloody warfare ever recorded in history, proves how groundless were their fears and how completely they were allayed.

This company was at Oak Hill, Mo. August 10, 1861, and Elk Horn, or Pea Ridge, Ark, March 7 and 8, 1862, after which it was transferred east of the Mississippi river and placed under the command of Gen. G.T. Beauregard, with all the then existing army of the trans-Mississippi. Here we reorganized on May 25, and re-enlisted for three years or during the war, and served successively under Generals Beauregard, Bragg, Joseph P. Johnson, Hood, and again under Joseph E. Johnson, under whom we were at the time of the surrender.

At Oak Hill were killed Lieut. H.C. Dawson, Frank Armstrong, Laught Atkins, H.H. Williams, B. Buchannon, A.B. Cox, F.A. Fowlkes, William Jordon, David Kirkpatrick and John Toomer, ten as true and brave as ever raised an arm to defense of their country.

The night before the battle we had orders to get ready to move at a moments warning. After everything was in readiness to move. Lieutenant Dawson called to John Toomer and said; "John get your fiddle and let's have a little dance and fun; it may be the last time we will ever dance together." How true the prediction, for before the morrow's sun had gone down their spirits, with those of the others killed, had flown, and their bodies lay stark in death's icy embrace. But they fell where the dead lay thickest, and the Blue and Grey, were mixed until it was hard to tell where either line had formed. General Lyon, one of the bravest officers of the Federal army, with his regulars, was in front, with orders to his men to shoot any man who attempted to run, and long discipline in the regular army had taught them what such orders meant. So the two lines surged against each other for six hours, first one and then the other holding the ground between the first line of battle. Here General Lyon was killed, and when he fell his men fled in dismay, General Seigle having been routed before with his volunteers.

After this there was no more fighting in Southwest Missouri in 1861, except an occasional skirmish by scouting parties. In the latter part of November Churchill's Regiment moved back to Spadra Bluffs, on the Arkansas river, opposite Clarksville, and went into winter quarters. Here we remained until February,1852, when we had orders to join General McCulloch, north of Boston Mountains, to meet the Federal forces, who were advancing from Missouri, and on to the 7th and 8th of March the battle of Elk Horn or Pea Ridge was fought.

Here our regiment was placed in reserve to McIntosh's, regiment, and owing to the fact that McCullough and McIntosh were both killed early in the engagement we were not brought into action at all on the 7th, but lay all the afternoon under fire of the enemy without firing a gun. That night Colonel Churchill took charge of all the troops belonging to McCullough's division of the army and carried them around to where Generals Vandern and Price were. Next morning we were marched around and changed from one position to another for some time, finally when we thought we were about ready to make a change we were ordered to fall back over the hill in front of which we had been lying for some time. When we had fallen back over the ridge , to our surprise the whole army seemed to be gone. And then for the first time it began to be whispered that we were retreating, which proved only too true. General Vandorn, who was in command, had made the mistake of sending our ordnance trains to the rear, and the troops who had been engaged during the day before had exhausted their ammunition, so that right upon the eve of a signal victory he was forced to retreat. He had. Also sent his commissary train with the ordnance train and consequently we were left with only three days rations, and it was just twelve days from the time the commissary train left us until we came upon it again. After our three days rations gave out the whole army had to subsist,as best it could for the remaining nine days in a sparsely settled, mountainous country, and our command being in the extreme rear, you need not be surprised if I tell you that we were getting tolerably hungry when we reached our train.

As soon as we had time to rest a few days we were ordered to DeVall's Bluff, on the white river, where we dismounted again and embarked for Memphis, with the promise that we should have our horses shipped to us in sixty days, but that promise was never fulfilled. When we landed at Memphis we were sent to Corinth to join the army of Tennessee, then being commanded by G.T. Beauregard. Here we reorganized, our first year, the time of our enlistment, having expired, and enlisted again for three years or during the War.

At the reorganization in May, 1862, the First Arkansas Mounted, (or rather dismounted) Rifles, Churchill's. the Second Arkansas, dismounted, McIntosh's old regiment, now commanded by Colonel Williamson; the Fourth Arkansas Infantry, Colonel McNair, and the Twenty-fifth Arkansas Infantry, Colonel Hufstedler, were organized into a Brigade.

R.P. Parks was elected captain at the organization, F.C. Huckby first Lieutenant and J.L. Lyon and I.N. Wilkinson second Lieutenants.

On the 10th day of May, 1862, we fought the battle of Farmington, just over the line in Tennessee from Corinth. After this we were ordered to East Tennessee and had to go South to Mobile, Alabama. And cross the bay and up through the northern part of Florida and Georgia, the enemy having possession of the direct route From here we were ordered into Eastern Kentucky. The enemy having possession Cumberland Gap, we had to cross the Mountians over a trail through Snake Creek Gap, a distance of sixty miles.

During the campaign we were under General Kirby Smith, and whatever may be said of him after his transfer to the trans-Mississippi department, he was certainly one of the most efficient officers that ever commanded an expedition like this. The object of this expedition was to attract as much attention as possible, and draw as many of the enemy to Cincinnati and Covington as possible, in order that General Bragg might by forced marches reach Louisville before General Ruel, who was at that time in command of the army of the Cumberland , and take the place.

After reaching the Cumberland river north of Cumberland Gap we had the garrison hemmed in and General Smith determined to starve them out and make them surrender. But it would have been funny to a disinterested person, provided he had plenty to eat, to have looked on and observed the process by which that starving out was done. The Federals, were in the gap and while they could not come out, one regiment of determined men, with a good battery, could have easily held at bay 100,000 men coming from where we were. Then they had plenty to eat (and so did we), but the only variety, we had was roasting ears , and I want to say right here that I think roasting ears are splendid with other diet, but they are neither meat or nor bread when eaten for several days alone. You may eat all you want all day and then go to bed hungry at night. After staying here ten days our train reached us. General Smith left General Ledbetter with a brigade to watch the Gap and he took the remainder of his force, 5,000 strong, and started north. At Richmond, twenty-five miles south of Lexington, we met General Rull Nelson with 7,000 troops going to reinforce the Gap. We met them ten miles south of Richmond late in the evening of August 29th. They thought they had struck a small squad of cavalry and in their letters home that night they said there was a squad of rebel cavalry in front of them and they were going to take them in the morning.. Next morning bright and early they came on to us, but we had stacked our guns in line of battle and slept just behind them, so we were ready for them, and you can perhaps imagine their consternation when the squad of cavalry, as they thought we were, didn't give way, and so after fighting for two or three hours, and we failing to fall back, as they thought we would, I suppose they thought there was more room further back, or at least there was less resistance in going that way than the way they were trying to go, and at any rate they fell back two or three miles, but formed again and gave us another right smart little brush. However, not so hard as the first. By this time the day was beginning to wane, and when they left their position this time General Smith sent the only regiment of Cavalry he had to the North of Richmond to pick up stragglers. Their third line of battle for the day was formed just south of Richmond about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, but when our line charged them they hardly stayed long enough to give us a parting shot until they fled in dismay; and the rout was so complete that when they passed out on the north side of Richmond Colonel Scott, with his one regiment of Louisiana cavalry, charged them and the whole command, officers and all surrendered to him. Thus, in one day, we had marched ten miles, whipped and captured an entire army, numbering at least 40 per cent more than ours. But it should be said here that the troops which we fought were mostly raw troops, who had seen but little service, while our little army was composed entirely of tried veterans, picked by General Smith especially for this campaign. Our loss in this battle was trivial when compared with what had been accomplished. In our company we had but one man wounded, George Bryant .

I have been thus particular in describing this battle because Barnes , in his school history, only refers to it in a foot note, as though it was of no importance whatever. (page 228) Now turn to page 273, same history, and read his description of the battle of Five Forks, April 1st, 1865, and see what he chooses to call a brilliant affair. Where General Lee, with a little handful of ragged, half-fed men, lay behind their intrenchments , and General Grant, with five to one in his front, dared not attack him; but by throwing out a cavalry force under General Sherdian almost equal to Lee's entire force, he marched around to General Lee's rear with this overwhelming force and compelled 5,000 of Lee's men to surrender; and this is what Barnes terms a brilliant affair. Now with these facts before you. With your hand upon your heart, ask yourself this question; How can we be true to our Southland and place such book in the hands of our children to study the history of the war between the States? If these were isolated cases it would not be so bad, but such is not the case. The whole history of the war is written by a biased mind and from a one-sided standpoint. He has utterly failed to see anything good or chivalrous done by the Southern Army, while he lauds the other side on every possible occasion. This is a digression from the subject upon which I was writing, but I felt that I could not, in justice, pass it by in silence, and I feel that all who read this well pardon the digression, at least all fair minded people.

During the campaign in Kentucky we marched 825 miles, according to the diary kept by Phillip Pfeifer, of Little Rock. During that campaign the fact was demonstrated that men can stand marching better than horses, because while we carried heavy loads all the time and the officers' baggage was hauled in wagons, relieving their horses of all superfluous load, yet the men came out of Kentucky in good health and fine condition, while almost all the officers' horses were thin and jaded. And it being in the fall of the year, feed was as plentiful as provisions, so the horses had plenty to eat all the way around. We joined Bragg again, as Barnes says, at Frankfort, but the battle of Perryville had been fought before that time. After leaving Frankfort our retreat was uninterruped, so far as I could see.. On the 23rd or 24th of October we reached Cumberland Gap and on the night of the 26th the snow fell about 12 or 15 inches deep. We went from Clumberland Gap back to Loudon, Tennessee. Where we remained until some time in December, when we were order to Murfreesboro, where we arrived just before the battle, which was fought December 31,1862. Here just half our company who were engaged in the battle were either killed or wounded, G.L.Horn and Warren Swilling being the ones killed. Our brigade and Ector's Texas Brigade opened the battle before sunrise by charging the enemy, who lay in a cedar brake just across a field from us, and before the sun was up we had captured a battery each from them, and before the sun was an hour high we had taken another, which made eight guns for us in an hour and four for Ector's men, or 12 guns for the division, but in the charge the division to our right failed from some cause or other to move forward, and but for the timely appearance of Cleburne with his Arkansas division our two brigades would have been annihilated.. The enemy to the right of where we cut their line in two had changed front and was getting ready to charge us on our right flank, when Cleburne, who always seemed to be in the right place at the right time when there was any fighting to be done, came to our rescue just in time to do for them what they were contemplating for us. With Cleburne to our right we swept on and on, until we had doubled their right wing back upon their center. But here as we emerged from a cedar brake grown up with bramble briars, and entered a peach orchard, we ran upon a line of fresh troops, entrenched behind the railroad running through the orchard. Our only show was to reform our broken line and to charge or fall back and as it was utterly impossible to form under such a fire as we were being subjected to, with half of our men behind us, either dead or wounded, and those of us who were there worn out with fatigue, as it was then in the afternoon and we had been fighting without relieved all day, our officers ordered us to fall back behind the cedar brake. This ended the battle of Murfreesboro so far as our end of the line was concerned.

CHAPTER II.

After the battle of Murfreeboro, Bragg fell back to Shelbyville, Tennessee, and remained there until spring. In the spring we were ordered to Mississippi and placed under General French. Here we were marched and counter marched, it seemed as much for diversion for himself and staff as for any other visible reason, until Vicksburg fell. At that time we were near the bridge on Big Black, After the fall of Vicksburg we were carried back to Jackson, and Grant moved out right after us. Here we remained for some time, but I have forgotten just what day the siege began or just how long it lasted. We did some pretty hard skirmishing while the siege lasted, but the enemy only charged our main line once or twice. G.L.R. Lafferty was killed here, on the skirmish line.

One day while here at Jackson, a very strange occurrence took place. We were on the skirmish line some distance in advance of the main line, and in our front was a field from which the fence had been destroyed. We were perhaps 200 yards from the field, and beyond the field we saw the enemy's skirmish line. We were not in sight of each other, and so there was no firing at that time. Our part of the line ran through a grove of young oak timber, through which we could see the opening of the field in front very plainly, but an elevation prevented us from seeing the other side of the field. While lying thus an order was passed down the line not to fire, that some of our cavalry were in front. There was nothing strange in this because orders on the skirmish line were frequently passed in that way. But here is the strange part. In a few minutes after the order not to fire was given a squad of Federal cavalry rode to the edge of the timber and formed in our front. They were close enough for us to hear some of their commands while coming into line. The commanding officer of the squad wore a blouse, unbuttoned and a white shirt, Some of the men in the rear seemed to hesitate about coming up into line and he seemed to be worried and fretted at them for being slow.

While this was going on and he was sitting at the head of the column fronting us and the men forming their line of battle on him and to his right. After trying for some little bit to get his men properly into line he turned and pointing his Sabre to those in the rear, said; "come up in the line there, God d-m you," loud enough to be distinctly heard by us.

After setting into line and staying a few minutes, I suppose long enough to get our position, they turned and rode off, and in a short time after began one of the most terrific cannonandings we were ever subjected to during the whole war. They had evidently got our position while reconnoitering, for they threw their shells with almost as much accuracy as they could have done had they seen us, They cut the tops of the trees behind which we were lying, and bursted their shells all around us.

It was here that John Haney moved his position, and Captain Parks gave him the rebuke that caused him to call himself "Old Excitable" frequently, as long as he lived. A shell had struck a tree a short distance in front of our line, which had almost stopped its force. It rolled and bounced along until it got right close to John Haney and stopped, with the fuse still burning. John thought, as any one would, that it was time to move, and to move quick, and he did so. He was lying in an open space, without a tree or anything to protect him, and had the shell burst it would have been almost sure to have killed him or wounded him. However, the fuse was damp and after spluttering a little while, went out without exploding the shell.. There was so much noise and confusion from the shrieking and bursting and crashing through the timber , of the shells, that Captain Parks had not noticed this shell stopping so near the line. Had he seen this he would never have said anything to John for moving, for while Captain Parks was, I believe , as grave an officer as we had in the army, he never blamed any of his men for protecting themselves when they could, and was always opposed to exposing himself or his men to danger unnecessarily .

About that mysterious order not to fire. Nobody knew from whence it came or who gave it. It came to us from our right, passed from man to man along the line with orders to pass it on down the line. We never knew who started it, and today it is as much a mystery, as far as I know, as it was that day.

Some one will be ready to ask why, if we knew it was the enemy in our front, we didn't fire. The reason was, that while we felt sure at the time it was the enemy from their uniforms and their movements, yet just having the orders that we did thought possibly some of our cavalry might have been dressed similarly to the enemy and sent to the front as a scout or reconnoitering party.

From the distance we were, we could have emptied almost every saddle at the first round. But had we done this and it had proven to be our men, what a fearful mistake it would have been. Had we not received the order a few minutes before not to fire, we would never have thought of them being our men. I have often thought of that time, and thought of them what a narrow escape that little squad had from death, and the mystery surrounding the order that saved their lives. I have thought, too, that they never saw us until they had formed their line and that their intentions were to advance cautiously into the timber after forming, until they located our line, but seeing us, came no further. After forming their line, they turned and moved off in file at an ordinary marching gait.

After the evacuation of Jackson our brigade moved back to Meridian and rested for some time. From here we were ordered to North Georgia. We arrived on Friday, were put off the train and marched out into line of battle, and on Saturday began the great battle of Chickamauga Park. General Rosecrans, Commanding the Federal Army, had according to his official report, 67,692 present, and 59,870 actually engaged. Loss in killed and wounded 11,113 making nearly 29 per cent of all engaged.

General Bragg, commanding the Confederate Army, had 44,846. Loss in killed and wounded, 18,000, making a little over 40 per cent of our entire force killed or wounded. Yet, notwithstanding the great odds against us to start with, and our extremely heavy loss, we held the ground and, according to Barnes, as one sided as he is. Had it not been for Thomas, we would have completely routed them, as he admits that all the right wing of their army was completely demoralized and routed, an Rosecrans with it. Our company had 22 men in this battle and 11, or just half of them, were wounded, but fortunately none were killed. It was fought September 19 and 20, 1863. On Monday, the 21st, what was left of our brigade was put aboard the cars and started back to Mississippi, as that part of the country had been left without sufficient force to protect it. Here we remained during the winter. Going into winter quarters at Meridian, and what time we remained here was passed as pleasantly, and indeed, I think I may safely say the Pleasantest winter of the whole war to us was the one passed at meridian.

In the latter part of April.1864, we were ordered from Mississippi to North Georgia again, this time to join Gen. Joseph E. Johnston on his campaign, known everywhere as Johnston`s retreat through Georgia.

One brigade opened the campaign, or rather General. Joe Hooker opened the campaign by trying to force a passage through Dug Gap and over Rockface Mountain, west of Dalton, and our brigade was the only troops there., or in reach, to defend the pass. We had been sent directly from the cars to this point, it being one of the most important picket posts to be guarded. We were sent out on the 7th of may, and on the 8th just after noon , as we were lying around and dreaming of an attack, because the place seemed almost impregnable, and proved to be so, the officer in charge of the signal station called out that the enemy was crossing a field two miles west of the gap. Immediately following same the second line. This was signaled down to Dalton, but before this message could be sent the third line had crossed the field; then came the fourth and close after it came the fifth. That began to look like we were going the have something to do.

The signal Officer signaled to General Johnston that 10.000 Federal were in two miles of the Gap, and it would be bound to be taken before help could reach it, and so it really seemed. But our officers were cool-headed, brave and determined men, from General Reynolds down, so instead of making preparations to retreat they had things put in order, for doing some of the hardest fighting that we did during the war; nor did we have to wait long until it began, As soon as they could march the two miles intervening between us and straighten up their lines a little, They came marching up the mountain in front of us; They with 10,000 and we with 1,000. But we had the odds in position almost as great as they had in numbers; but their men were brave and daring, as we had plenty of opportunities during the next four months to find out. It looked like a sin to run brave men into such a place, for it was almost like driving them into a slaughter pin. Back of us was General Johnston's men in camps and not in a shape to bring into battle at once. The enemy knew this, they fought with desperate Determination. General Cleburne with his division was sent to our help as soon as possible, but it was getting dusk when he arrived and the fighting was over before his men got in line. Word has met them on the way up that the Gap was taken ,and when they arrived and found it was a mistake, it would have done your heart good to hear the cheers that went up from then for the little band that held their position so long against such fearful odds. During the engagement a part of our regiment killed and captured the man who placed the first stand of colors on Missionary Ridge during that battle. He had his commission as Captain in his pocket when killed, which had been given for the deed. He also put the first and only stand of federal colors on Rockface Mountain that evening, but he forfeited his life in doing it. He, with a squad of about 20 men, got on top of the mountain by a flank movement, but about the same number of our men met them as they reached the top, and a hand to hand fight ensued to see who should hold the ground. This man stuck his flag staff into the ground and called to his men to rally to it. About this time a one-eyed Irishman by the name of Johnson, a private, but to whom the title of Captain Johnson had been given , shot and killed him. Another of our men jumped at the flag and got hold of the staff and tassel, but one of their men at the same movement sprang at the flag and caught it, tore it off the staff and made his escape with it.

We never knew how many of the enemy were killed and wounded. They carried away all their wounded, and all their officers who were killed, both commissioned and non-commissioned. How many privates who were killed were carried away we never knew, but two days, they not coming back to see anything about their dead, and the stench from their dead bodies becoming unbearable, a detail was made from our command to bury them. I was on the detail. We found 120 dead, all privates. We also picked up 1,600 stands of arms that had been left by them. Judging from the number of guns left on the field, they must have carried off many of their dead along with the wounded. This was our first acquaintance with General Hooker's men, or fighting Joe hooker, as he was styled by admirers in the North. He had three divisions under him in this campaign. Every man wore a star on his hat. One division wore a red star, the second a white and the third a blue, making the red, white and blue, and were called the Star Corps of Sherman's Army. This how ever, was not our last call from Hooker and his men. Polk's corps, to which we belonged, was on our left center, and Hooker on their right center, during the campaign just beginning. This arrangement placed us in a position to make us close neighbors for the next four months, sometimes not being more than a hundred yards apart. During that time the acquaintance, just begun, was cultivated with a great deal of assiduity., And I can say this much for General Hooker and his men; Whenever we called upon them, no matter how unreasonable the hour, they were at home and we might depend upon them a cordial reception, and being of true Southern blood, and that quality, too, that always begets true chivalry, and a reciprocal nature, we did our best, on all occasions, to make their call, if not pleasant, at least as satisfactory as possible. Thus , while we were comforting each other in one of the greatest and deadliest conflicts ever recorded in the world's history. There sprang up between us a feeling of intimacy almost amounting to friendship. Sometimes we would agree. Between ourselves, not to fight or shoot at each other for a certain period of time, or without giving each other warning, and during all those four months of almost daily fighting not one of those truces, plighted, was broken. As stated above, during the whole of the succeeding four months' fighting on some part of the line was almost a daily occurrence; but the principle engagements from Dalton to Atlanta were, Resaca, Dallas, lost Mountain, and Kennesaw Mountain. So closely were we followed and so stubbornly did General Johnston contest every foot of the ground, that from the time we left Dalton until we reached Atlanta, July 10th our brigade only lay down two nights out of reach of the enemy's small arms.

CHAPTER III.

At New Hope Church, we remained ten days, and the firing was kept up so continuously that the timber between the lines was killed. As we passed up through there the next fall on Hood's campaign into Tennessee we went right by New Hope Church, and as the eye could see up and down the old line of battle there was but one green tree to be seen. It was an Elm.

While remaining here, one night by some means there was a false alarm raised, each side thinking the other was charging them. We had a battle royal for a while, both sides acting on the defensive. They used both artillery and small arms. And while no great deal of damage done, I think one off at a distance might easily have imagined that the two armies were fighting a duel to a finish., and that the fate of the war was depending upon it. Again, while we were here, the enemy drove our cavalry off the ridge they were occupying, on our extreme left, some five miles from where we were, and our brigade was ordered around there to help them retake their position. By the time we got around to where they were and formed it was dark, but to wait until morning we would not only have to drive them off the ridge, but out of a line of breast works as well. Knowing this would be the case, the charge was ordered that night. It was a bright moonlight night. And while a charge by moonlight might be thought to be a grand sight, and no doubt would be to one at a safe distance, yet it is certainly one of those grand scenes to which distance lends enchantment, and the safer the distance the more enchanting the scene. As soon as our mission had been accomplished we were moved back in front of New Hope Church, ot our former place in the line.

We fell back to Kennesaw Mountain about June 17th. When the first line was formed our division covered the biggest part of the mountain. An Alabama brigade in our division lying immediately in front of the summit. They thought the elevation was too great for the enemy to reach them with shells. So when the line was formed they threw off their knapsacks and cartridge boxes, and instead of digging trenches to protect themselves they threw themselves on the ground for a good rest and a nap of sleep. However, their rest was not long undisturbed, for while we were forming on the mountain our neighbors, the Hooker's were getting into position in front of the mountain, and as soon as they got things straightened around a little and a few batteries planted, they fired a salute of a few rounds to let us know they were at home and ready for business, and at the same time try the elevation, which proved the Alabamians were wrong. For before they fired a half dozen shots they were bursting their shells right in our line.

That evening we were moved around to the left of the main mountain and occupied the gap between the two mountains. Here we remained until about the 1st of July. I might say here, by way of explanation, that Kennesaw mountain is really two mountains, hence the name Kennesaw, which is an Indian name and signifies twins. They are connected by a low ridge. One of the mountains is considerably higher then the other, so they are called Big Kennesaw and Little Kessesaw.

Bledsoe's Missouri Battery was planted on Little Kennesaw, to our left, and did such fearful execution that the enemy brought up and planted a whole regiment of artillery just in the rear of their infantry in order to silence it. Here we had one of the grandest artillery duels one night that was witnessed on the land during the whole of the war, between Bledsoe's battery and the enemy's regiment of 42 guns, down in front of the Mountain. They could silence Bledsoe, but as soon as they would cease firing he would have his guns rolled to the brink of the mountain and have them all six turned loose at once and get them under cover by the time they could reply. This was kept up from time to time as long as we remained here. One day they turned their guns loose on us, and that too, without any provocation, for we were not bothering them in any way what ever. However, they could do us but little damage, as our part of the line was almost entirely protected by the bluff in front, but there was a considerable elevation in our rear, and a great many large rock, so while it tool a center shot to hit our breastworks it was anything but pleasant to lie there and see one shell after another, and sometimes a dozen at once, bursting just above our heads or striking in the rocks behind us and bursting, scattering pieces of shell and rock around us like hail.

The Federals charged the mountains one day, thinking I suppose, that our troops had been taken from there to strengthen other parts of the line. However they failed to break the line. Among their killed was an officer, who had a letter in his pocket that he had written home the day or night before. In that letter he said: "Tomorrow we charge Kennesaw Mountain and will take it like a d-n". He ought to have been better acquainted with Joseph E. Johnston by that time than to have written such as that home. It was then six weeks since they had commenced battling against his lines and they had never broken them a single time. They had forced him to retreat, but, it had always been done by flanking, with overwhelming numbers. He never tried to hold his position until driven from it, but always retreated before his lines became so weak as to render them untenable.

There might be a whole volume written of incidents that occurred from Dalton to Atlanta, but what I have said will give the reader an idea of the hardships and privations that we underwent and the amount of hard fighting that we did; for what I have said of Dug Gap, New Hope Church and Kennesaw Mountain might, with propriety, be said of almost every mile of territory from Dalton to Atlanta. And bow that we have reached Atlanta the campagin is but half over, and the bloodiest and most disastrous part is to come yet. Here a difference arose between President Davis and General Johnston. Davis wanted Johnston to hold Atlanta at all hazards. This Johnston refused to do, replying that it was no military point and that would not give twenty of his soldiers for it. The result was Johnston was relieved and Hood placed in command in his stead. President Davis came to Atlanta to attend to the business himself, and inspected the troops on parade with General Hood the day he took command. The men said they would cheer Johnston when the President and General Hood rode before the line, but orders were issued that if any man cheered Johnston he would be courtmartialed and punished severely. So when they rode past the line the men refrained from cheering for Johnston, but stood like posts, with their heads hung down, and refused to cheer at all. How could we do otherwise." The man we loved almost to idolatry and one in whom we had every confidence, one who we knew from past experience regarded the lives of his men above everything else was to be taken from us, and one to be placed in his stead in whom as commander of the army, especially under existing circumstances, we had no confidence, though General Hood was as brave and true an officer as ever drew a sword in defense of right. But no General when measured by Johnston; ability, Johnston was in the army of Tennessee , what Lee was to the Army of Virginia. We had learned from long experience that when Johnston gave the command to go forward he knew, almost to certainly, what was in front; and during the entire campaign from Dalton to Atlanta, though we were retreating before an army, according even, to Barnes, of more than double our numbers, yet Johnston never turned around and said charge, but that we drove the enemy from his position, neither were our lines broken a single time by an assault from our front during the two months of hard fighting . It had taken Sherman to force Johnston back over the 100 miles of territory intervening between Dalton and Atlanta. It is very common for an army to lose confidence in a commander who is continually retreating, and that, too, without any promise of stopping at any particular point. But having subsequent events shape his future coarse. This seemed from all appearances to have been Johnston plan. And yet notwithstanding this, and the fact that our ranks had been more than thrice decimated in battle during the last two months, there never was an army had more confidence in its commander than the Army of Tennessee, had in General Johnston., on the night of July 10th, 1864, when they marched into Atlanta. We had heard of the difference of opinion between President Davis and General Johnston. We also knew that all the heavy Military stores had been moved so that in the event an evacuation became necessary, it could be accomplished without confusion, and had General Johnston said the next day it was better to evacuate Atlanta his men would have obeyed the order without a murmur.

How different things went and how disaster after disaster overtook our army after General Hood took command subsequent events will prove.

General Hood took command under a pledge to hold Atlanta, no matter what sacrifice it might cost.. In order to do this he determined to drive General Sherman back across Peach Tree Creek, North of Atlanta. So on the 20th, two days after his taking command, we were ordered to form in front of our abatis, for the purpose of charging the enemy, who were lying between us and Peach Tree Creek, behind breastworks, and numbering two to our one. After we had formed and while waiting for orders to move, the word was passed down to the line that General Johnston was in command for the evening. This was done in order to stimulate the men and give them confidence in the move; and while no one supposed the move was one of General Johnston's planning. Yet we all thought that if he had consented to it so far to take command. He knew pretty well what was in our front, so we went into the charge believing we should do as we had done in every engagement for the past two months, drive everything before us. We drove their first line out of their breastworks, but when we got to them, and stopped to straighten up our lines a little before advancing farther, as the smoke had cleared away we discovered just across a little field another line of breastworks, with the men we had driven out of the first line to reinforce those occupying that line. It was now nearly Sundown. We lay in their breastworks we had captured until it was getting dark, when we retired behind our own fortifications. Thus we had made a desperate charge. Lost many of the best men in our corps and accomplished nothing.

Again on the 22nd he dashed Hardee's corps against Sherman's left center with the same result as our charge on the 20th. On the 28th he moved us back to our old position on the left and hurled us against Hooker's corps. In the engagement we lost heavily, but failed to accomplished anything,, not even driving the enemy from their first line of works, as we did on the 20th. These were the principal engagements during the time we were in Atlanta.. Though there were was continuous skirmishing along the line as long as the siege lasted, sometimes amounting to almost a general engagement. During the siege, and while General Wheeler, with all our cavalry force except a small detachment, was in the enemy's rear, General Kilpatrick, one of Sherman's most dashing cavalry officers, was sent to our rear to cut the railroads coming into Atlanta from the south. . Our brigade was sent down the road leading from Macon T Atlanta to intercept him and on August 20th, just as he was ready to strike the road with his brigade of cavalry, our brigade charged him and ran him over to the ninth Texas Cavalry, who were deployed behind him watching his movements. The entire movement had been so quietly made that he was not aware of any Infantry being nearer than Atlanta.. When he found it was infantry in his front, he supposed he was surrounded by infantry, and forming his men in columns of four, he told then they were surrounded by infantry and unless they cut their way out they would be captured, as Stoneman was on a similar raid before this, in this same country. So saying, he ordered his men to draw sabers, and heading the column himself, made a dash for the rear. When he struck the Ninth Texas Cavalry, who dismounted and deployed as skirmishers, he supposed they were the skirmishers; dashed through their line without paying any attention to them; but when they ran into their holders with the horses they saw their mistake. They knew there was no line behind the horses, so they let into cutting and slashing among them. I saw one of the men not long after, who had two saber cuts on his head.

Soon after this we evacuated Atlanta, and on the 30th of August we fought the battle of Jonesboro, about twenty miles south of Atlanta. After this battle the two armies rested for a little while, This battle ended the campaign in North Georgia.

CHAPTER IV.

Reynolds` brigade left Dalton with 1,000 men for duty, according to their official report, and according to the same report they lost 600 killed and wounded during the campaign.

Our company left Dalton with 24 men for duty and killed and wounded during the campaign. Some who were off at the beginning of the campaign came in during the time; others, who were wounded on the campaign, got well and reported for duty again. So when we started on the next campaign we had 14 men in our company for duty, and the brigade had, I suppose some 500 or 600.

Almost the middle of October General Hood, by a flank movement, went back north of Atlanta in Sherman's rear. After reaching the railroad north of Atlanta he followed it for a long way. Tearing it up, burning bridges and destroying everything in the way of supplies that could not be used by his army. After leaving the railroad he went to Tuscumbia, Ala. Here he waited a few days for our baggage to come up, but it failing to reach us, we started on about the 20th of November, north. Crossing the Tennessee River at Florence, Ala.. We started direct for Nashville. At Franklin we came upon General Schofield, with an army inferior yo ours; and here is where General Hood certainly made another great mistake. We got to Franklin about noon on, November 30th. General Schofield was too weak to come out of his fortifications to attack us, and we had our pontoons along and nothing to hinder us from laying it across Harpeth River, crossing over , and by making a forced march going into Nashville that night. But General hood thought he could capture Schofield with his entire army. So he formed his men on the south side of town, and reaching from the little river on the east to the mountain on tn the west, a distance of something over a half a mile. By the time everything was ready it was getting past the middle of the afternoon. When the charge was ordered I am sure General Hood, nor any one, knew what was in front of him. From the river, on our right and extending a quarter of a mile, ir nearly half the length of our lines, was a young bois d'arc hedge, through which it was impossible for a man to go without an axe to cut his way. To the left of this had stood a thicket of Black Locust, which had been cut, commencing on the outside from their rifle pits and falling them with the tops in the direction of our approach as they cut them they cut off the smaller limbs, leaving the larger ones, which they sharpened, making an abatis almost as impregnable as the bois d'arc hedge. To the left of this they had a wide ditch in front of their breastworks. From the river their breastworks ran just behind the bois d'arc hedge , while impossible for anyone to go through, yet it being winter and the leaves off they could see and shoot through it almost as well as if it had not been there.

General Hood formed his men in three lines of battle, one behind the other. He had for what reason I am unable to say ,put one brigade of Cleburne's division in our division, and one of our bridges in support to the balance of Cleburne's division. General Walthall, our division commander, and General Reynolds both objected to the way the attack was to be made and General Walthall told General Hood, after the lines were formed, that if he would give him Reynolds' brigade and Ector's Texas brigade he would go around and cross the mountain, strike them on their right flank from the rear, and while he (Hood) made a feint in front. Capture them with but little fighting. To this Hood objected. Everything being now ready, the advance was ordered.

I am unable to give the position of all the troops on the line, but in this little narration that is immaterial. We were in the center on the third line, immediately in front of the locust batis, referred to above. To our left and joining us was the brigade taken from Cleburne's division and known as the First Missouri Brigade but composed of men from Missouri, Texas Louisiana, and Arkansas, who were captured at Vicksburg, and went in to parole camps until exchanged. So you might say they were the cream of what was left of Pemberton's army after the fall of Vicksburg as they refused to go home but went into camps and waited until exchanged, that they might go back into active service in defense of their homes to which they refused to go.

In front of this brigade, on the first line, was the remainder of Cleburne's division. Between these two lines was the Alabama brigade taken from our division. This, when we started on Johnston's campaign in North Georgia., was, without exception, the finest looking brigade of troops I ever saw go on dress parade. They had been at Mobile on provost duty all the war. They were made up mostly of young men, with wealthy parents, and having as easy thing, and a nice time, it was no trouble to keep their companies and regiments full. So when they were ordered to North Georgia, in May 1884, their four regiments numbered fully 4,000 men for duty, all well dressed and well drilled. But alas! They were like hot house plants set out at noon and exposed to an August sun, and before we reached Atlanta more than 3,000 of them were either in the hospitals or at home. It is surpassingly strange why such men were ever put behind such men as Cleburne's for support.

I used to drive oxen when a boy, and in making up a team we always put the heaviest best yoke of cattle to the wagon tongue for what wheelers; we then wanted a good yoke to be put in front for the swing, as we called it. I cannot account for General Hood putting that brigade where he did by any manner of reasoning except that he acted upon hypothesis that they being the sorriest brigade on the field the best place to put them was in the swing, between two of his best brigades.

We had formed in a clump of timber, about half a mile from the enemy. From the edge of this timber to their breastworks was about six or seven hundred yards.

As stated before, Cleburne went first; the Alabama brigade immediately after his line, and our line was to remain 600 yards in the rear of the second line, or to leave the timber when Cleburne struck the breastworks, which we could tell, as it was an old field from the timber to the breastworks. As the two first lines moved out we followed them to the edge of the timber. Here we were halted and General Reynolds rode slowly down the line, giving the order himself, that there might be no mistake. He said; "Boys, we are to start from here when our first line reaches the enemy's breastworks, and the orders are not to fire a gun until we cross the breastworks, and then empty your guns and use the bayonet." Had General hood known what was in front of their breastworks he certainly would have known that such orders were useless, because we could not get to their breastworks from where we were to the right. The right half of our line went of course no further than the bois d'arc hedge and the locust abatis, but to the left of the abatis Cleburne's men scrambled over the ditch and breastworks and with clubbed guns forced them out of their intrenchments, but when this Alabama brigade came to the ditch on the outside of the breastworks instead of going over they dropped down into the ditch and refused to go any further,

Had the first Missouri, or our brigade, been, where the Alabama brigade was, we would have crossed the breastworks, and with Cleburne's men have driven them back and routed them before help could have come. But Cleburne's men having no support, the enemy rushed in reinforcements from the other parts of their lines and overpowered them, so that the greater parts of those who crossed the breastworks were killed or wounded or captured.

While this was going on our third line was out of reach, but coming up as rapidly as it could be moved in order. The enemy was also strengthening their work points. When we were within about 200 yards of their works, we began meeting our men coming out, those in front of us and to our right telling us we couldn't get to their lines on account of the obstructions mentioned above.

But one of the grandest attributes of a good officer or soldier is to do just as near what he has been commanded by his superiors as he can, and as General Hood had told General Walthall to cross the breastworks with his division, and he had given the orders to his brigade commanders and they to their men, and these orders never having been countermanded by General Hood, our line was kept moving on, at the same time our officers trying to rally the men who were going to the rear, but in this failed. They had been in front and knew what was there, and a bayonet charge from behind would hardly have induced them to go there again.

Our line kept advancing until we reached the bois d'arc hedge and locust abatis. General Reynolds, seeing what was in front and knowing we would be safer there than attempting to retreat across the field for 600 yards, dashed along in the rear of our line himself, and gave the command to lie down and wait for farther orders, then turned and rode out. His horse was wounded, but he was unscathed. He was right about our safety. The ground where we were lying was a little lower than where the enemy were, so they were overshooting us, while we lay still, but almost every one who attempted to go out was shot down. It was almost sundown now. Further orders never came, so we lay there until it was getting dark, then fell back into the timber. General Walthall had two horses killed during the engagement, and every one of his staff, couriers and all, were either killed, wounded or their horses killed during the engagement. We lost nearly half of our brigade in this engagement, in killed and wounded, though our company's line was light, only two or three being wounded.

Capt. R.F. Parks command our regiment in this battle and also at Nashville, further. He commanded it from the time we left Georgia to go on this campaign until near the surrender.

I must say just here a few words about the mixed brigade, called the First Missouri, of which I have spoken before. They were joining us in the left, as I mentioned, and occupying the same part of the occupied buy Cleburne's men, who went over the enemy's works. They covered the turnpike which ran on a little ridge and almost level, so they had no protection from the lay of the ground; thus they were fronting the part of the enemy's line that had been so strongly reinforced when Cleburne charged it. So, out of the 600 men who went in with that little brigade, 101 were killed and 300 wounded. General Cleburne was killed while leading his division, just before reaching the breastworks. General Adams, of the Mississippi, was killed in the same charge, and so near the enemy's line it was said his horse, which ran forward, fell with his head hanging over their breastworks.

I had often heard of dead men being in piles on the battle field, but that was all the place I ever saw it. I think I would be safe in saying that if our dead had been stood up in a row, side by side, with their shoulders touching , as men form a line of battle, they would have reached half the length of our entire line.

General Hood made the remark, when some of the other officers suggested that he go around Franklin and on into Nashville that night, that Nashville was the goal of the confederacy and Franklin was the key to it, and he intended to have it.

What a slaughter had been made, apparently to satisfy the ambition of one man, and the opportunity to take Nashville forever gone! Next morning, December, 1st, our pontoons were laid across Harpeth River, and we took up our line of march for Nashville, but General Scofield had preceded us the night before.

When we reached Nashville General Hood made an attempt to take it, but failing, he fell back out of reach of the enemy's guns and remained there two weeks, during which time the weather was extremely cold. It snowed and sleeted about five or six inches deep and was hard enough to bear up a horse. We had only such baggage and clothing as we had carried during the campaign through Georgia the simmer before, and many of the men were barefooted and their clothing almost worn out and only one blanket to the man and not a tent in the regiment. This snow and sleet finally broke up with rain, flooding everything. During this time the enemy were reinforcing in Nashville, and by the time the snow was gone outnumbered us two to one. General Thomas was in command of the Federal forces at this time. On the 15th he moved out and attacked General Hood and after two days' fighting drove him from the field. Here our loss was as great as at Franklin, but the fighting covered more ground, time and territory than at Franklin. Our Company lost here five killed and four wounded out of fourteen, all during the first day. It happened in the way; during the first day at one time coming into the line our brigade came behind a stone fence, and this Alabama brigade's place was to our left, in a meadow with only a few walnut and sugar maple trees for protection. But when they got to the rock wall, instead of moving on and taking their places they stopped, and neither persuasion nor threats from their officers could make them budge. This parleying was consuming and a good deal of time and pretty soon the enemy came in sight. General Walthall, seeing the situation, rode up to General Reynolds and asked him if he would their place and give them ours. General Reynolds',' reply was; ""y men will go anywhere they are ordered." And with this remark ordered a left face and double quick But the enemy was close to us by this time and subjecting us to one of the most deadly fires any troops ever tired to form under. By the time we got into line the enemy was right on us and our whole line giving away. When we got back to where the next line was formed we had but five men left of the fourteen who had but a few minutes before stepped out so proudly from behind that stone wall when General Reynolds said his men would go wherever ordered.

We kept fighting and falling back until night, when we dug trenches and threw up breastworks. Our corps was in the center with Hardee on our left. Our Division lay in a field and about 300 yards back of us, at the edge of the field , was a considerable mountain, with a bench very much like the bench on Nebo, only not more than 100 feet above the field in which we were lying. The Road crossing this Mountain ran upon this bench, North of where we were lying in the filed. It followed the bench going south perhaps a half of three-quarters of a mile, then turned over the mountain through a gap going west. Our division had done no fighting until about the middle of the afternoon, though the enemy had moved up in the same field with us and in sight during the night and thrown up breastworks; In the afternoon the enemy moved their right around, down the river, behind this mountain and were driving Ector's brigade over the Mountain towards where Hardee's men were. General Ector sent a request for our brigade to be sent over the mountain to help them drive their skirmishes off the mountain. So our line was moved up from the left, so as to fill the gap we would make when we moved out. This was done by the men moving along in the breastworks so that the enemy saw nothing of the move, but we had no way of getting out to the woods except right across the field, in plain view of the enemy. In order to do this we were ordered to get out of the ditches and run to the timber at the foot of the mountain, where we were to get together and form. As soon as the enemy saw us leaving the ditches instead of firing at us they sounded a charge, thinking we were retreating, and by the time we had got formed and on the bench of the mountain, they left their breastworks and charged our. Directly after they crossed their breastworks and started towards ours, our Alabama brigade threw down their guns and came as fast as they could run for the mountain. However, they never stopped there and that was the last we saw of them until we had crossed the Tennessee river into Alabama. They got away from Nashville with 119 guns in their brigade, as we learned afterwards. As soon as they gave way General Walthall sent a courier to stop our brigade . Then Walthall came himself and told Reynolds he must hold that bench until Chestham, who was commanding Hardee's corps, could pass between us and the Mountain and out through the gap to the right, if it cost every man we had to do it, as there was no other way for him to escape. Reynold's brigade held the pass as ordered, but when Cheatham and his men had passed be we fell in not very far behind, and when we crossed into the valley on the other side the enemy were coming Down the valley from the north, and if we had been a little later they would have got us.

CHAPTER V.

This Valley was quite narrow and at the south end of it ran the Granny White Pike, over which most of our artillery and wagons had to pass. That made this valley as important a point as the one we had left, and our brigade was called upon to defend it. In order to do this General Reynolds had one regiment formed across the valley, and the others would fall back a piece and form, one behind the other. When we flanked or pressed too hard in front the front line would fall back in the rear of the other lines and reform.

This kind of maneuvering was kept up until night, but by this time we had almost passed out of the valley. During this time they had tried every means they could to force us out of this narrow valley before dark. They had tired charging our front with infantry, and failing at this they had tired flanking us with cavalry, then with infantry. Then they would try charging our front again. But our officers had the advantage of choosing their own ground upon which to form, and with this advantage they failed, with all their strategy and superior force, to drive us fast enough to get us out of the valley by dark. But when dark came we were in half a mile of the road over which our artillery and wagons were passing, and still further on, and in the direction in which we were going, we could still hear the booming of cannon. All supposed that those in our immediate front were the enemy, following our retreating army. The enemy had stopped following us from the rear, but it seemed that they had closed the mouth of the little valley, through which we had to pass to get out. Our condition was, indeed, a hopeless looking one at that time. With the enemy on three sides, and so far as we knew, an almost interminable range of mountains on our right. Total strangers and with out a guide, night had been welcomes by all as a Godsend, but the smoke from the battle that was just ceasing, had rendered the darkness impenetrable, so escape seemed impossible. General Reynolds called a halt here, and after consultation with his officers, sent scouts forward to see who was in our front. We had no further fears from our rear, so long as we did not attempt to go back that way, so while the scouts were out reconnoitering our front the mean gathered around General Reynolds to know what was up, and what was going to be the next move, all having the utmost confidence in him and willing to do whatever he suggested. This question was asked by perhaps a hundred men as the gathered closer and closer to him, (General Reynolds's could be approached at any time by the humblest private in his brigade with perfect impunity, and with the assurance of an answer to any proper question he might ask). After all he had huddled around him , he said; "Men, we have obeyed orders, we have done what General Walthall ordered us to do. Now, if those troops in our front are our men we are all right; if they are the enemy there is but one thing I can see left for us to do and that is to surrender."

This was the only time General Reynolds ever suggested surrendering, under any circumstances, during the whole war. And I will say just here that Reynolds' brigade never had a regiment nor company of men captured during the war. Neither did we ever have our battery of artillery taken from us. Though at Chicamagus, when the enemy charged our line at one time, when they were repulsed, we hadn't enough artillery men left to man the guns, nor horses to draw the guns forward to a new position, and some of the caisson lids and the tarpaulins that were folded up and strapped onto them were so full of holes that they had to be replaced with the new ones. While this is true, we captured not less than twenty guns from the enemy during the war.

Well, to return. When the scouts returned you can imagine how glad we were when they said it was our men. But they were retreating without any orders whatever; infantry, artillery, wagons and all going pell mell, trying to see which could get the furthest from the battle ground in the shortest space of time. The rout had been complete. The few troops who were willing to try to hold their ground could do nothing because one brigade giving away forces the line on both their right and left to give back, unless the gun can be filled up immediately.

The brigade in our division which I have mentioned before giving way, and there being no reserve line to take their places. The whole line was forced to retreat. And they being near the center of the line , and our line from there to our extreme left lying in front of a mountain, had it not been for the determined resistance of the few troops who preserved order, the great part of our army, with our artillery and wagon train, would have been captured. That night a consultation of war was held, and it was decided to put all the troops who had preserved their organization, amounting to something like 2,000 men, under General Walthall. And he under General Forrest, to guard and bring up the rear. From there to the Tennessee river we guarded the center, while Forrest protected our flanks with his cavalry. The remainder of the army General Hood piloted out. It could not be said that he command on the retreat, because there was no order. And consequently no army to command; it was simply a rabble, and only held together because that was their only chance to obtain subsistence. It was, to use another homely comparison, more like driving a herd of wild Texas cattle, General Hood in front with a bell on his horse, in order that they might know which way to go, and we behind as drivers, and at the same time tp protect them from the hordes of hungry wolves which were howling at our heels all the time. On Christmas night we marched eight miles, through mud from shoe mouth to knee deep, and about 11 o'clock crossed Sugar Creek, wading it and washing some of the mud from our feet and legs, and going across a farm and through a lane we went into camp for the remainder of the night, about a half mile from the creek, driving out some stragglers and taking their fires and their rail piles which they had arranged for beds. Here I got one of the best nights' sleep I got on the campaign. Our color bearer being sick and not going on the campaign, I carried the colors for him, and slept with our adjutant and surgeon. The adjutant and I ran upon some fellows that night who had a good fire and their bed fixed by laying a log with one end on the log and the other in the mud. This arrangement put the side of the bed to the fire instead of the foot, and the adjutant being a large man, allowed me to take the side next to the fire, and while the bed was none too soft nor our cover to heavy, yet being worn out with fatigue, and with a large man behind me and a good fire in front, I slept soundly until reveille sounded the next morning. We were now pretty close up to the herd, so next morning General Reynolds' was in no particular hurry about getting out. About the time everything was ready to start some scouts came up and said a brigade of Federal cavalry was crossing the creek where we had crossed the night before. Our battery had limbered up and driven out into the road to start and to show those who are not acquainted with the facts how little our infantry cared for the enemy's cavalry. I will relate what occurred here Captain Humphrey. Of the battery, rode up to General Reynolds and said; "General, shall I unlimber and get ready for action?" General Reynolds' reply was; "No Captain, you may drive out. I don't want a battery in my way when I go to fight cavalry." And this too in the face of the fact that they had more men than we did, and we had no support right near. We threw up some little Rail piles, so as to conceal our line partially from them. . No effort whatever was made to prevent them from crossing the creek, and forming on the side that we were on. While they were doing this, General Reynolds walked along the line and said; "Boys, let them get up close before you fire. Then go for them, and everyone of you that gets a horse may ride it until we cross the Tennessee river." We got a few horses, however, for when one of them was killed or wounded, the horses would follow the others out. We had but one man wounded in the brigade in this engagement. We left a squad of Forrest's cavalry there to watch their movements. They staid all day and the next night, and said when they left the next morning they were still on the other side of the creek, shelling our rail tiles with their artillery, but had not ventured across any more. This is where they stopped following us and turned back.

Nothing of any importance occurred from here to the Tennessee River. Before reaching Florence, where we crossed as we went in, it was learned that the enemy had ascended the river to that point and a little above, to the foot of the mussel shoals with gun boats. This caused our army to have to make a deflection to the left and cross over the mussel shoals. This was almost like laying a pontoon over a cataract, and having light boats, and then not all good, made it extremely hazardous; but that was the only way of escape. However, we were near the last ones crossing, and if any accident occurred we heard nothing of it. The river was very high, and to say ir was swift would be tame an expression to give you anything like an adequate idea of it, but piece in the school reader describing how the water comes down at Ladore Suits my ides of this scene better than any description I can give. There was no road to the river. We descended to the river through a narrow defile in the mountain, and ascended the mountain on the south side through another. We were carried back, some ways south of the Tennessee River and remained there until some time in March to rest and recuperate and try to get into shape for a spring campaign. At least three-fourths of the men were barefooted, a great many not even having the semblance of a shoe or sock. Our clothing, light to begin with, was now, the most of it, in tatters, and our rations light, consisting mostly of corn meal and the very poorest of beef; some of the beef so poor as absolutely to have no marrow in the bones, and in many instances had the whole beef been put in a kettle and boiled and set off and cooled, there would not have been a tablespoon full of tallow on the water. This sounds like fiction, and many who have grown up since the war no doubt will not believe it, but it is as true as the Bible itself. Not more than ten or twelve thousand of the forty thousand men turned over to General Hood by General Johnston on the 18th of July before were here, and I doubt if 5,000 of that number could have been induced to go into battle under General Hood at all. But General Johnston was asked to take command of this little squad of half-clad and fed soldiers and try to put them in fighting shape again as he used to have them.

Most everybody would have said that was an impossibility, But as soon as it was known that Johnston had agreed to take command again, you could hear men all over the camp saying they were willing to go anywhere under Johnston, and subsequent events proved what they said was true. While we remained here our little army recruited up to thirteen or fourteen thousand men. With that little band Johnston was ordered around to North Carolina to meet Sherman with his 60,000 men, who had been to the coast of Georgia and swept around through South Carolina and turned back north.

We were carried there as rapidly as possible and concentrated between Goldsboro and Wilmington, where we met Sherman at Bentonville about the 10th of April. Here the last battle of any importance was fought. Here old Bob, General Reynolds horse, that he had ridden since the spring of 1862, when we went east of the Mississippi River, was killed, and General Reynolds lost one of his legs at the same time; and in this our Alabama brigade acts a conspicuous part again. When we came into line their place came in a field, and they refused again to take it, and General Walthall called upon General Reynolds to swap places with them again, as we had done at Nashville. They were not to take the field until the line was ready to move, and had they gone on in the first place, they would perhaps, not have suffered any worse than they did. But In the maneuvering to get into position the enemy got sight of us, and as we were getting to our place a shell struck General Reynolds' horse, cutting off one of his fore legs at the shoulder, and striking Reynolds' leg, tearing off the cap and injuring it so badly as to necessitate the taking of it off above the knee, then passed on and tore off the horse's hind leg on the other side. After this we moved in behind the line just to the left of the field an lay down . Just before the order to move forward General Walthall rode up to our brigade and said; "Boys, you have lost your commander, but you shall not suffer for the want of one, I'll command you myself," and our advance was managed on adroitly that though we took the old field, our loss was no greater than many other places on the line, General Walthall , as I said took command of our brigade as we lay just to the left of the field and behind the line. Cleburne's division lay just to the right of the field, and when we came into line would fill up the gap. Cleburne's men were ordered forward first to attract the attention of the enemy, so when the battle began there was no one in the field. Just at that moment our division was ordered forward, and General Walthall rode to the head of our brigade and gave the command right face, double quick. Every man in the brigade knew what was to be done, so there was no confusion, and beforethe enemy had discovered us we had double quick out into the field, left faced, and by another double quick were in line with Cleburne's men, and in 15 minutes more were crossing their breastworks, Here we hardly halted long enough to reform, but pushed on after the first line and drove them and the second line out of their trenches. Here a halt was made and before the small arms ceceased, General Johnston came riding in front of the line, and as he passed our division he made this remark; "It has been reported to me that the army of Tennessee was demoralized, if that is true I had rather command demoralized troops, because they fight better.

This demonstrated what men will do when they have confidence their commander. For this little army, which so short a time before had been so completely demoralizes that a great many thought it could never be reorganized again, was that day, under his magnetic influence, in as good shape and fought as determinedly as any troops ever did, and not with standing the fact that the enemy lay in front of us with two line, and they behind intrenchments, yet when everything was ready and the command given to fo forward, the order was obeyed with such impetuosity that, as before stated, both lines were taken almost at a single dash.

After this battle we moved back to the little town of Jamestown, where Johnston learned that Lee had surrendered on August 9, and desiring to avoid all the bloodshed possible, and knowing that further fighting was unless, he entered into negotiations with Sherman for terms of surrender, as soon as it had been positively learned that Lee had surrendered.

Everything being arranged, we stacked our guns and surrendered May 9th, just one month from the time Lee had surrendered at Appomatax Court House, Virginia.

CHAPTER VI.

According to the terms of surrender, both officers and men were to retain all private property. The troops were to be given transportation to the capitals of their several states, and there be disbanded. This latter was done in order to prevent the men from straggling over the country where the surrender was made, which has been devastated of everything, almost, upon which they could subsist.

When the surrender was made, and the last roll was called, there were just seven present of company H. to answer to their names. They were; H,C, Cunningham, Ruel Williams, F.G. Brown, W.A.Ellis, W.D. Jennings, R.H. Dacus, and John Spencer. Ruel Williams was fourth Corporal, the lowest officer in the company, but had been commanding officer since Henry Cornelius, the orderly Sergeant, was killed at Franklin. Of the 118 men composing the company, twenty were killed and wounded at Oak Hill, ten of that number being killed, one wounded at Elk Horn, Ark., one wounded at Richmond,Ky.., thirteen killed and wounded at Murfreesboro, Tenn., four killed and wounded at Jackson, Miss., eleven wounded at Chickamauga, Ga., twenty-one killed and wounded on Johnston's retreat through Georgia, three hundred at Franklin,Tenn., nine killed and wounded at Nashville,Tenn., five of nine being killed, and on wounded at Bentonville, N.C., sixteen died from sickness, making a total of 100 killed, wounded and died, some two or three were left behind or sent off to the hospital and never heard from afterwards. Several others were killed and wounded after leaving the company and coming back to this side of the river.

Now when it is considered that thirty-four of the company were discharged during the first year of the war, and in the spring of 1862, who had never been wounded, it will be seen at a glance why there was so few at the close, and indeed, you will be ready to say that it is impossible for so many to have been killed and wounded, because there were not that many left in the company. But the seeming discrepancy can be easily explained in this way. Quite a number were wounded twice, and sometimes three times, in different engagements; while other were wounded once, and in some instances twice, and then killed or died afterwards. These were all counted as so many different men, wounded and killed.

After the surrender we had to march from Jamestown, N.C. across the Blue Mountains, a distance of 200 miles, to Greenville, East Tennessee before we could get transportation. After arriving at Greenville, to complete our humiliation, I suppose, they had a Negro brigade to open ranks and stand at present arms, with bayonets fixed, while we marched through, between their ranks. While passing through they tantalized us considerably. They told us to remember Fort Pillow, where Forrest had killed the whole garrison and buried them in their breastworks, and Nashville, where Cleburne's division slaughtered the thirteenth United States Volunteers. For a little while it looked as though we might meet with the same fate that befell Fort Pillow, or perhaps our bones be left to bleach on the side of the mountain.

It was at Greenville General John A. Morgan was killed, and to the shame of Arkansas, and Reynolds' brigade in particular, it must be said that the man who claimed the honor of killing him was a deserter from the Second Arkansas McIntosh's old regiment . He was at Greenville when we arrived and was sent out as transportation officer, to get the number of men and to ascertain what cars and other arrangements would be necessary. But, instead of coming out as one coming among friends, he brought a body guard of 100 well-armed men with him.

He was a very strong man and after killing General Morgan he put him on his horse and carried him out to show that it was General Morgan. The United States gave him a Lieutenant's commission for the deed. However, with all this he met with a very cold reception from his old comrades.

After arrangements for transportation were completed we were loaded into freight cars like so many cattle and started for Little Rock. The engineer in charge of our train was drunk, and seemed determined to take us through as quickly as possible. Everything went well for the first fifty miles or until we were in tem miles of Knoxville, Tennessee. When while running about thirty miles an hour, and crossing a bridge that had been burnt and replaced with a temporary one, the track spread and let the wheels drop onto the stringers. The wheels ran the stringers all right until they struck the crossties on the levee, when everything collapsed. In this accident ten were killed and fifty crippled,

Here I shall have to bring this narrative to a close so far as what occurred to the company from here home is concerned, as I was one of the unfortunate ones. When the car I was in left the track I was standing between the doors. It was the first car that ran off; the engine, tender and two flat cars in front of it having passed over all right. As it left the track the coupling broke and it turned over. As it turned over I fell through the door and landed about the bottom of the levee and the car on top of me. Here I lay until almost every one else had been cared for, as I was head and heels under the car and was not discovered until I was missed and a search made for me. I was conscious all the time and knew that death was at the door and that the door was ajar, and unless help came soon he would step in and claim me as his victim. I could hear men running here and yonder, calling for help to relieve those who were hurt; I could hear the groans and cries of those who were mangled by the cars. I attempted to call for help but in the din and confusion I could make no one hear me. The car was gradually settling down upon me closer and closer every minute, and every minute I called for help took an extra amount of breath, the one thing of all others I stood most in need of just at that time. As calling for help was only shortening my breath and hastening the end, without any hope of bringing help, I determined to lie quiet and await results. After a while I heard Henry Cunningham say; " I believe it's Bob Dacus," During everyone's life, I presume, there is some word or act that is looked back to tell with more pleasure than any other. To my mind those were the most welcome words I have ever heard spoken, either before or since.

After some delay another train was sent to the wreck, and those of us who were crippled were taken on to Knoxville and put into a prison hospital. No one who saw me expected that I would come out of there alive. I was carried into the hospital on a litter. My shoulders and hips were so badly injured that I had no use of my limbs at all, and when moved by some one else the pain was so excruciating as to be almost unbearable.

I lay here several days, seemingly suspended between life and death; but after a while, to the surprise of all, I commenced improving and by the middle of July was able to start for Arkansas. During my stay in this hospital I feel that I am under special obligations to Colonel Brazzleton, of the First Tennessee Cavalry, and old citizen friend of his, who were in prison there at the time. Their homes were at Greenville, but they had many friends in Knoxville, who brought them delicacies every day, such as one sick could relish and through them and their friends those of us who were worst hurt were tolerably well cared for. They staid up stairs and I down, and as soon as I was able to crawl off my I would crawl on the floor and crawl on my hands and knees upstairs to play dominoes, which was about all the amusement we had. When I got so I could get out on the floor and walk around my bunk by holding to it with my hands and supporting myself I felt almost as proud as when I was taken out from under the car.

As stated above, about the middle of July I thought I could get to the depot, which was about a quarter of a mile from the hospital. There was three others to start that morning, coming west. I supposed I would be sent home, or as far as Little Rock at any rate, but they put us on board the cars and sent us down to Nashville under guard, and there gave us our paroles and told us if we got any further help we would have to call on the Southern sympathizers for it.

There was a government boat lying at the wharf, which was to start for St Louis in a short time. They told us we might go where we pleased on it, or rather we might ride on it wherever it went. Provided we furnished our own rations. We decided we could not worst our condition by going to St. Louis, or anywhere else for that matter. We all drew a dollar in silver apiece at the surrender, and some of us had some of it yet. With this we bought some loaf bread and a piece of ham and went aboard of the government boat, not caring much where we went; but when we got to Cario, Ill, there was a boat just landed, loaded with Southern prisoners, going south. The Captain was a southern man and told us he would take us to Memphis, so we gave up our trip to St. Louis and went to Memphis instead. Here I got off and made my way out to Covington, where I was born, and where I got money to come home on, after stopping there and making a short visit. I landed at Dardanelle August 16, making four years, one month and three days since I left. As for the injuries referred to above, I have never recovered from them, nor do I expect to, as they have been gradually growing worse for the last ten or twelve years. And yet my recovery has been so much nearer perfect, and my physical suffering so much less than anyone, under the circumstances, could have anticipated, that I feel that I have much, very much, to be thankful for.

As the reorganization in May 1862, our brigade was commanded Lt. Gen, T.J. Churchill. It and a Texas brigade commanded by Gen. W.L. Cabell, formed the division which was at that time commanded by Maj. Gen. J.P. McCowen. Our brigade afterwards became known throughout the army of Tennessee as Reynolds' Arkansas Brigade, and the Texas brigade became as well known as Ector's Texas Brigade. The two brigades were in the same division from this time until about the time Vicksburg fell, when we were separated by General French, as stated in another place.

There seemed to be an enmity existing between the two brigades from the time the division was formed until the battle of Richmond, Ky. That was the first opportunity they had of trying each other on the battle fields. Here they fought side by side, each trying to out vie the other, but at night either one was willing to concede the other his equal, and from that day their enmity was turned into a friendship that nothing ever marred during the war. That friendship could not have been stranger had they all been not only from the same state, but from the same county. One great dread of soldiers in battle is being flanked and cross-fired upon. That day's fighting taught us that with Ector on our left we had nothing to fear from that quarter. At Murfreesboro again they were on our left, but or right failed to come up, and as I said in a previous article, had it not been for Cleburne's timely appearance we would have been swept from the field, both Ector's and our brigade. Almost the same thing occurred at Chickamauga. In the last charge on the 19th our fight support failed to come up. (However they had orders to halt.) Longstreet was to our right and everything was not just ready to move forward. Neither did we know we were so close to the enemy. Orders were given for the line to halt, and Longstreet's men got their orders in time to halt, but as General (then Lieutenant Colonel) Reynolds rode up with orders to halt. He discovered the enemy only a few yards in our front, and instead of giving orders to halt, right in the face of the enemy, and they in ambush and ready to fire, he gave the command to charge, and by the time both ranks of their line had fired we were almost close enough to use the bayonet; but they had commenced giving back. We drove them back for something like a mile. They couldn't swing their line around on our right, as they attempted to do at Murfreesboro, but after we passed they turned their battery on us and raked our lines with canister shot. Several of our brigade were killed and wounded by this battery. It was from this battery I was wounded.

Ector's brigade and ours were separated just before the fall of Vicksburg by Old General French.

It was out east of Vicksburg and some time in June. The weather was fearfully hot and dry, and the dust in the roads in places almost shoe mouth deep. General French had been commander of some post pretty much all the time till then, and had a set of dudes for his staff.

When we would stop to rest they would come dashing up and down the road ever few minutes raising all the dust they could, and almost running over some of the men. We got tired of it after awhile. Our officers had never treated us with such contempt. So when they would ride through quietly we said nothing, but we got to singing for them when they rode so fast. The brigade, they struck first would start the tune to the patter of their horses' feet and as they passed on others would take it up until they had passed clear through two brigades. They stood it a few days and reported us to general French. He issued orders to have any man arrested who sang any more when his staff of orderlies were passing their ranks. Next morning the orders were given and for a while everything went pretty quiet; only occasionally some one would call out to others not to sing. "It is against orders to sing." "Boys, if you sing you will be arrested." And such remarks as that as they went through. Finally, some one suggested there were no orders against whistling and started a tine. It only needed a suggestion, for all hated General French, and his staff, and in a little while they were whistled in at one end of the division and out at the other. This so incensed his chief of staff that he rode up to Colonel Reynolds at the head of our regiment while we were resting one day and said; "Colonel, if you don't have your men to treat my men with more respect I'll have my men to fire into them.. Reynold's says; "All right, Colonel; but if they do my men will return the fire. If your men will treat mine like gentlemen they will treat yours the same way, but until they do it, I shall not try to restrain my men, and whenever you feel like firing into them do so; but you do so at your own peril." They never fired into us, but General French got so mad and knowing the attachment between the two brigades he had us separated and put into different division. He called us devils, and said no one could do anything with the two brigades together Our fighting together from then on was accidental, but the friendship and confidence that grew between the brigades, were just as strong to the close of the war, as was proven at Nashville, when Ector's brigade was being overpowered and driven from their place on the skirmish line, they sent for our brigade to come and help them instead of their own division. Another little incident will serve to show what confidence our officers and especially General Walthall, than whom a braver officer never went on the battlefield, had in the two brigades. I refer to his proposition to General Hood at Franklin to take the place with the two brigades if he would give them to him.

As long as Walthall command our division, when he expected harder fighting at any particular place along the line, pr was called upon to send a brigade to any important point, to be taken or held, or to do any kind of hazardous work, he always called upon General Reynolds.

He always called this the post of honor. And when such orders came, General Reynolds would tell us in a joking way; "Boys, we are to have the post of honor again today." We all knew what that meant, and the position was tendered us do often during the last two years of the war that we hardly had a respectable body guard for the commander of the post left at the close of the war.

This closes all the history except the roll.

CHAPTER VII.

Preface To Roll

A part of the work which is to follow has been done about twelve years. Naturally a great many changes have taken place since that time. Those with stars set opposite their names have since died. The number of stars that have been placed there in that time, when compared to the few who are left, admonish us that what is done to preserve a true record of the deeds of the Southern Soldiers must be done quickly, as we are, like "Poor Lo," fast fading away.

And when the present generation has passed away, with such men as Barnes to write history, our children will be taught that the South was to blame for all the misery and bloodshed caused by the war, and it will be thought a disgrace to be called the son of an ex-Confederate Soldier. Then such men as General Woodberry of Massachusetts, can say with impunity what he said at Chicago at the world's fair, that "We are willing to give our Southern friends credit for believing they were right while the war was going on, but now they will have to acknowledge they were wrong," because the south will have no Governor Tunery, then as she had at Chicago to get up and reply to such calumny by saying; "I believed I was right when I went into war,

I believe I was right when I came out of the war, I believe I am right yet, and I shall teach my children I was right.

THE ROLL

1.* T.J.. Daniels, captain: resigned October 1,1861. Came home, but afterwards raised another company and joined Hill's regiment. He is still living on his farm, five miles west of Dardanelle.

2.* L.T.Brown, first Lieutenant, promoted to captain when Daniels resigned, which position he held until the reorganization, May 22,1862. Has died since the war at his home above Dardanelle six miles on the Ft ,Smith road.

3. H.C.Dawson, second Lieutenant. Killed at Oak Hills Mo. August 10,1861

4.* M.A.J. Bonville, third Lieutenant, was promoted to second Lieutenant when Dawson was killed, and then to first Lieutenant when Daniels resigned to take Brown's place. This position he held until the reorganization. Not being re-elected, he returned home but soon re-entered the army again as Quartmaster of Hill's regiment, which position he held until the surrender in '65.

5. J.C. Banks, first sergeant, was elected third lieutenant to fill Bonville's place when he was promoted, and was afterwards promoted to second lieutenant when Bonville was made first lieutenant. This position he held until the reorganization. Not being reelected he returned home but soon entered Hill's regiment where he served until the close of the war. He was wounded slightly at Elk Horn, and after his return from east of the Mississippi was wounded and captured at Dardanelle. He is living at present on his farm five miles west of Dardanelle. Moved to Mushogee,1.T, since this was written.

6. J..A. JACOWAY, second sergeant. Discharged some time in the summer or fall of '61. Died since war in Mississippi

7. G.T. HOLMES, third sergeant. Was appointed ordnance sergeant of the reorganization, which position he held until near the close of the war, when he came home on account of bad health, Is practicing medicine in Fourche Valley. Since the above was written he has moved out to the Arkansas River, where he is still practicing.

8. JACOB COWGER, fourth sergeant. Was discharged in Kentucky, October,'62 on account of being over conscript age and in bad health, He died at his home, five miles west of Dardanelle, in April.1881.

10. BOSTIC DAWSON ,second corporal, discharged on surgeon's certificate in 1861, came home, but afterwards entered Hills regiment and was killed in Dardanelle, at the time Banks was captured.

11. W.C. ATKIN, third corporal. Discharged in 1861, on account of accidental shot in foot, but afterwards entered Hills Regiment and served until the close of the war. He died at Dardanelle in march, 1871, after a long and painful confinement, caused by a burn received from the explosion of a coal oil lamp while lighting a fire in a stove.

12.* R.N. ATCHISON, third corporal, Discharged on surgeon's certificate. Date of discharge forgotten. Was in Texas last account. He and I were in the same mess during the winter of 1861. After we went into winter quarters at Spadra Bob came home on a few days' leave of absence and when he went back he took a Negro along to do his part of the cooking, and to attend to his horse. Teaching him to cook was out of the question and could have been taught to cook he was to filthy that even a soldier could not have eaten his cooking. But Crusoe was all right when it can to bring wood and water, provided some one went with him; but if he went alone and some one told him to leave his load of wood in their house he would do so, thinking it was all right, and if coming with a bucket of water and some one met him and told him to empty into their bucket and go back and get another he would do so thinking that was alright too. Then if he sent him to feed his horse he would alone, and some one told him to give it to another horse he would do so, provided he did not meet a third person who would tell him to give it to another horse, and so on. No matter what you sent him to do, he would always do what the last one told him to do. Nor only our company but the companies adjoining ours, soon found out these peculiarities about the negro, and in order to have a little fun some one or other was nearly always playing pranks upon him, which caused Bob a good deal of trouble, and kept him in hot water about crusoe a good deal of the time. Crusoe was like most Negroes- he wanted to be close to the fire of nights. This little peculiarity gave the mess a good deal of trouble too. He would get down on the hearth of nights and the chuncks from the fire rolling down burned his blankets and clothing, and singed the wool on his head until he looked like a regular, sure enough singed cat. Another one of his peculiarities was to want to see into everything in the house, and know all about what was going on. One day while all were out of the house, Crusoe got down one of our cartridge boxes and proceeded to examine it. (As many young people of the present day never saw a cartridge box I will describe one. It looks very much like one side of a country doctor's saddle bags, and is carried upon a belt , worn around the waist and sometimes supported by a shoulder strap. It has a tin can inside, which is divided into little receptacles, just large enough to hold a cartridge. They are usually intended to carry forty cartridges each.) The box had only two cartridges in it. He set it down on the floor, placed the two cartridges side by side , then got him a coal of fire and laid on the top of them, and commenced blowing. Pretty soon the fire burnt through the paper of which the cartridge was made, and the power exploded, blowing Crusoe over and burning him badly about the face and head. He had been so completely surprised by the explosion that though he was badly burned and suffering a great deal of pain, yet he was still worst scared if possible. He thought his time had come to hand in his checks. After he had become quiet enough to learn anything from him and when questioned about the matter he said; "I thought them things was candles moulds, and them little things was little candles, an'I was tryin' to light 'em'. It now came Bob's turn to wait on Crusoe, and by the he had gone through with a two weeks seige, feeding him and leading him around every where he went, he concluded it would be less trouble to wait upon himself than both Crusoe and himself, so as soon as Crusoe was well enough for him to a bill of lading, signed up in good order, he shipped him back to Dardanelle.

19. * F.G.BROWN, One of the seven at the surrender, May 9,1865. At Franklin, Tenn. Felix Brown came nearer obeying orders than any man in the company. We had orders, as stated elsewhere, and to fire until we had crossed the breastworks of the enemy and. then empty our guns and use the bayonet. We failed to cross their breastworks, as stated elsewhere also; so Felix Brown came out with the same wad in his gun he started with, though he went as far an any one of the company or brigade. After coming out some one asked him how it happened, or why he never shot. He said: "Because we had orders not to fire until we had crossed their breastworks. We never crossed their breastworks. Neither was the order not to fire ever countermanded; that's why I didn't shoot." He is now living five miles south of Dardanelle,

20. PAUL BUSHOLT, Missing at Oak Hills, Mo. August 10,1861. Has never been heard from since.

21. B. BUCHANNAN, Killed at Oak Hills, Mo. August 10, 1861

22. J.D. BURK , discharged in July or August, 1861. Afterwards raised a company in Mississippi and served as Captain until the close of the war. He is living somewhere in the southern part of the state at present.

23. D.F. BERRY, Being solicited to accept an office in another company at the reorganization, he was transferred for purpose. Their Captain being afterwards killed, he was promoted to that position, which he held to the close of the war. He died in Dardanelle in 1878.

24. S. BETTERTON, He was the only substitute ever hired in the company. He being hired to take the place of David Arbuckle in 1861. He was put on detached service as a mechanic, in the spring of 1862. Was never with the company any more.

25. * G.W. BRYANT, one of the sergeants from reorganization, wounded at Richmond, Ky. August 30 1862, and at Chickamauga, Ga. He was living in California when last heard from.

27. H.C. CUNNINGHAM, Wounded at Franklin, Tenn. November 30, 1864 and at Bentonville, N.C. Was one of the seven present at the surrender at Jamestown,N.C. May 9, 1865, and it seems that he must had made a vow. Then or at some subsequent time, never to surrender again, as he stands behind his counter, leans back upon his bachelor dignity and defies all the beautiful young ladies who may attempt to capture him by their smiles. But all who are at all familiar with the fate of war know that sometimes, by well directed, continuous firing, the heaviest guns are dismounted, the strongest battlements razed, and the enemy walk in. take possession and compels the fort to surrender. So if he is not careful some one may yet fire the shot that will knock down the seemingly impregnable door to his affections, walk in, take possession and compel him to make another surrender, Since the above was he has surrender again, as predicted above. He concluded there was no use trying to hold the fort longer against such fearful odds, since all had followed but himself and "Fayette Hart, so he decided to capitulate while he had the chance to do so upon fair terms. And now he sits in the corner and trots the baby on his knee, seemingly as well contented as if the world and the fullness thereof were his.

CHAPTER VIII.

28. A.B. COX, Killed at Oak Hills, Mo. August 10, 1861. He was not related to any of the Coxes' here. I don't know where he came from.

29. ROBERT CAMPBELL, died in Missouri some time in September,1861. He was a brother to John Campbell, the father of W.A. and Charley Campbell of Dardanelle.
30. H.B.CORNELIUS, wounded on Johnston's retreat through Georgia and afterwards killed at Franklin, Tenn. November 30, 1864. He was elected orderly sergeant at the reorganization (May,1862), which position he held unyil his death. His position, next to the Captain's was the hardest to fill of any in the company, as all reports had to be made by him, and everything coming to the company had to be distributed by him to the men, making it the most difficult place to fill, satisfactorily, of any (Except the captain's) in the company, yet no one ever accused Henry Cornelius of being incompetent, or unfaithful in discharging the duties of his office.
31. G.F.CORNELIUS, wounded on Peach Tree Street, in front of Altanta,Ga. July 20,1864. Furloughed on account of wound. Died some time since the war at his home near Gravelly Hill in Fourche Valley. Date of death not know by the writer.

35. R. DUNFORD, died sometime in September 1862.
36. W. DOUTHETT, discharged some time in 1861. Cannot say weather dead or alive, at present.
37. W.A.ELLIS, One of the seven at the surrender at Jamestown, N.C. May 9, 1865. Died in Carden's Bottom since the war. Date of death not known. Though he was never wounded, yet he was as faithful a soldier as the company had; always at his post and ready for any duty that came up.
38. T.A.FOWLKES, killed at Oak Hills, Mo. August 19, 1861/
39. ROBERT FULTON, wounded at Oak Hills, Mo. August 10, 1961 and at Murfreesboro, Tenn. Dec 31, 1862. Being permanently disabled at Murfreesboro. He was given an unlimited Furlough . One very remarkable thing in connection with Robert Fulton's soldier life is that he was with the company about twenty months, made a good soldier, was wounded twice and yet never fired a gun. At Oak Hills, he was wounded before the company became engaged; At Elk Horn, though we were under fire, two days, yet both General McCulloch and General McIntosh being killed, we were never brought into action. At Richmond,Ky, he was on detached duty, and at Murfreesboro he was again the first man wounded in the regiment. He died at old Fulton Homestead seven miles south of Dardanelle, April 25, 1883. But few have ever died in Yell County that have been missed more by the poor than he.
40. THOMAS FOWLER, Left the company at the reorganization, May, 1862. And after coming home, joined the Federals. He is living at Gravelly Hill, in Fourche Valley.
41. H.J. FRY, wounded at Chickamauga, Ga. September 20, and furloughed. Afterwards served in Hill's regiment. He is living at present in western Texas.

48. J.C. GARRETT, received several minor wounds in different engagements. Was a good soldier. Left our command and joined a company in the Trans-Mississippi Department, with which he served until the surrender. Still living in Texas at the last report.
49. RUSSELL GARRISON, wounded at Oak Hill's, Mo. August 10, 1861, Died some time in 1863, at Atlanta, Ga..
50. D.H. GRACE, Died at London,Tenn., some time in December, 1862. Was left there as we came out of Kentucky, before the battle of Murfreesboro.
51. Q.V. HANEY, discharged on surgeon's certificate some time in 1861. Afterwards died. He was an uncle of J.L. Haney, also to Dr. J.B. Foster, and Mrs, Charley Meyers, of Dardanelle.
52. J.L. HANEY, was fourth sergeant from the reorganization in May, 1862, until his death. He was killed on Peach Tree Street in front of Atlanta, Ga. July 20, 1864. He was rather of an impulsive, excitable nature.. I don't mean cowardly, for such was not the case, but easily excited about anything, and the reason I mention this peculiarity is on account of a remark he made just a short time before he was killed. Once during the siege of Jackson, Miss. Captain Parks spoke to John about, cautioning him for fear he would excite the men in the Company, and John often referred to this afterwards, calling himself, "Old Excitable." On the 20th of July, 1864, we were called out in front of our breastworks and ordered to form in line of battle. General Sherman, with the army of the Cumberland, numbering three to our one, lay between us and Peach Tree Creek. General Hood had been placed in command of our army two days before this, with a pledge to hold Atlanta at any sacrifice. To do this he had determined to drive Sherman back across Peach Tree Creek. With the odds against us, we expected nothing short of bloody work: Neither did we expect that all who formed with us on that line of battle would ever form together again. In neither of these were we disappointed. As we formed our line John Haney remarked laughingly, as he stepped into line; "Here come "Old Excitable," and then he said in a more serious manner; "Boys, I know I am excitable, but if I am killed today no man can say that John Haney ever acted cowardly." Sure enough, when we returned John Haney was missing. He had answered to his last roll call this side of that turbulent stream that separates us all from and endless eternity. But no man ever accused him of acting cowardly. The charge was over and we had captured their line of breastworks, and John was distributing a fresh supply of ammunition to the men when he was killed; that being one of the duties of his office. He died at his post.

53. G.L. HARN, killed at Murfreesboro, Tenn. December 31, 1862. This was Gaz. Harn, as he was familiarly known to everybody here before the war. He was a brother to Col. E.G.Collier's first wife, and an uncle of Charley Harn's.
54. W.N. HENRY, wounded at Mudfreesboro, Tenn. December 31, 1862, and at Ressca, Ga., May 14, 1864. Having lost his hand at Ressca, he was given an unlimited furlough. He was in business in Dardanelle awhile after the war, and went by the title of Major, which was an assumed title. Was in Texas when last heard from a few years ago.
55. L.HENSLEY, sent off to hospital from Meridian, Mississippi, in the spring of 1862, and never heard from afterwards. Supposed to have died.
56. * F.C. HUCKABY, elected first Lieutenant at the reorganization, in May 1862, and held office until the close of the war. He was wounded at Murfreesboro December31, 1862, and at Lovejoy Station, Ga. August 20, 1864. Rather a singular incident occurred with his first wound. H was wounded in the middle finger of his right hand between the first and second joints, crushing the bone, and then lodging without passing through. The wound at Lovejoy Station disabled him from for the war, so he was given an unlimited furlough. Has died some time since the above was written in Mississippi.
57. L.G. HART, furloughed from Meridian, Miss. January 20, 1864. He came home, and when his furlough expired, reported for duty on this side of the Mississippi river, and was wounded during Price's campaign into Mississippi that fall. He is merchandising at present in Dardanelle, and the only one of the company left to keep Henry Cunningham company and console him in his state of single blessedness. Since the above was written he and Cunningham have both taken down their colors and surrendered . "Fayette fought manfully for a while, but after Cunningham fell he concluded that it was useless to try to hold out longer, all alone, so he grounded arms again. When General Lee and Johnston saw they could gain nothing by holding out longer they both surrendered honorable terms, rather than carry on the war when they saw our cause, though just, was hopeless, and I think "Fayette did well in striving to emulate them, instead of trying to hold on to a forlorn and hopeless cause.
58. T.L. HILL, wounded at Murfreesboro, Tenn., December 31,1864. Had it not been for me Tom Hill would have died that night. He was wounded by a limb or tree top that had been cut off by a cannon ball, falling on him and smashing his breast and shoulders. That night after the battle was over, I got permission to go back to the field hospital to hunt him up and see how badly he was hurt. About 9 or 10 o'clock I found him a little off to one side, lying on his blanket, and in so deep a stupor that I could not arouse him at all. He was suffering severely when brought from the battle field, and the doctors had given him too much morphine. I didn't know that was the trouble with him,at that time, but supposed it was caused from the effect of the injury he had received. He and I had been messmates and close friends for a long time, so as soon as I saw the condition he was in, I tired to get a doctor to see him, but failed, as they were all so busy with other wounded. Not being able to get a doctor, and believing he was dying, I went back to him, and took my seat by his side, on his blanket, determined to stay with him until the endcame. He lay just as I had found him, until some time after the turn of night, when he began retching, as though he was sick, and presently commenced vomiting. This he kept up at short intervals for the remainder of the night; and this is where and how I saved his life. He was still in as profound a stupor as when I first found him, so I watched him closely, not so much as allowing myself to doze all night, and when he would commence retching I would turn him on his side just as he commenced to vomit. Had I not done this, he would have strangled to death, with the fluids and other matters that were being ejected from the stomach. Neat morning he began showing some little signs of returning life, and eventually regained consciousness . He was furloughed when he was able to leave the hospital. Was not able to soldier any more during the war. Is living somewhere in Kansas at present.

59. A.B.HOY, wounded at Chickamaugs, Ga. September 19, 1863. And afterwards, killed at Vining Station, Ga. July 4, 1864. He was a nephew of Capt, H.P. Barry, and had only been here a short time from South Carolina when he enlisted.
60. A.M. JOHNSON, discharged in Kentucky in October,1862, being over conscript age. He came home, but afterwards joined Captain Daniel's company and served in it. He has died since the war in Carden's Bottom.
61. W.D. JENNINGS, was one of the seven at the surrender at Jamestown, N.C. May 9,1865. He and S.V. Fry were detailed to cook for the company during the last year of the war, so gave him the sobriquet of Nancy, or Nance, as he was generally called. He is living on his place and farming nine miles south from Dardanelle.
62. WILLIAM JORDON, killed at Oak Hills,Mo. August 10, 1861. As I have been asked by some persons lately who William Jordon was, I will state here that he was a half brother to J.N. Atkins, and also to Laught Atkins, who was killed the same day, close to him.
63. VEST JONES, wounded at Oak Hills, Mo. August qo,1861 and discharge on account of wound, but afterwards joined Daniels' company in Hill's regiment and served until the close of the war. He is living on his place at present above Dardanelle, on the Fort Smith road.

CHAPTER IX.

64. B.J. JACOWAY, transferred in 1861 to Holowell's company, afterwards killed in attempting to swim the Arkansas River below Dardanelle. He and Ira Hunt, having been surrounded by bushwhackers, were compelled to swim the river under their fire. It being in the night, Ira made it across and escaped, but Ben was never seen any more. It was never known whether he was killed or drowned.
65. DAVID KIRKPATRICK, killed at Oak Hills, Mo. August 10, 1861.
66. S.T. LYON, killed at Resaca,Ga. May 14, 1864.
67. J.L. LYON, was elected orderly sergeant when J.C. Banks was elected lieutenant. At the reorganization in May, 1862, he was elected second Lieutenant, which position he held until his death. He was wounded at Oak Hills, Mo. August 10,1861. Some time in 1863 he was given a furlough and while at home was killed by bushwhackers.
68. T.G.LANGLY, was wounded at Oak Hills, Mo. August 10, 1861. Was on detached duty most of the time afterwards (as teamster) until his death, some time in 1863.
69. SAMMIE LAWRENCE, killed at Nashville, Tenn. December 15, 1864. He was the only boy in the company that was under age at the reorganization that remained. General Reynolds afterwards made him his orderly, in recognition of his fidelity and bravery. Nor did he ever betray his trust. When he fell, we left five killed and four wounded, out of fourteen, leaving but five not hurt.
70. G.L.R.LAFFERTY, wounded at Oak Hill's Mo. August 10, 1861, killed at Jackson, Miss. July 10, 1863. He and T.J.McCray and I got permission to go out in front of the line for the purpose of reconnoitering. We had to go some distance to the right of where were lying in order to miss the field in our front. This we did before starting to the front. The Twelfth Louisiana Regiment was lying where we left our line to go to the front. We told them where we were going, so they would not mistake us for the enemy and shoot us. After we began to get pretty close to the enemy we dodged from tree to tree until we came near a house. Here we stopped and parlied for some time as to what we would do. We were right up to the horse lot fence and just beyond it was the yard around the house, and just beyond the house a short distance, in a grove of timber, we could see the enemy. They had already shot several times at us before we reached the lot. Tom McCray and I wanted to turn back from here but Lafferty wanted to go to the house. The lot had a high staked and ridered fence. All around it, and in order to get to the house from where we were, we would have had the fence to climb. Where we were, then run across the open lot and climb the same kind of fence on the other side to get to the yard, then cross and open yard to get to the house. All this had to be done in plain view of the enemy. We told him it was impossible to get to the house without being killed, but he argued that we could climb the first fence and run across the lot to the other side before they would notice us, and then wait awhile and climb the other and run across the yard to the house, as we had run from tree to tree, getting to the lot.
71. Finally, however, he agreed to go no further, and after staying here for some time we decided to go back. This had to be done as we had come, by making short runs from tree to tree. McCray and I started, and Lafferty kept saying he would come directly for us to go on. After getting back some distance, and knowing how venturesome he was, we stopped and begged him , and tired every way to prevail upon him to come back. He kept telling us to go on, that he would not try to go any further, but would come back directly; Yet he kept staying where he was , and shouting occasionally. We finally went on back to the line, believing he would come after a little while. When we got back to the line we found every thing in a stir, getting ready to charge the enemy, In making the charge the twelfth Louisiana went right by where we had left him, After the charge we fell back to where we were before. That night Lafferty failed to come to the company. Next day some one of the company went through the Twelfth Louisiana and found his gun. We knew our guns wherever we found them, because they were Sharp's rifles, and the only ones in that part of the army. The guns were all numbered, and the numbers of each man' gun was set opposite his name on the roll. They said they found him dead, about half way between the lot fence and the house, in the yard. He had undertaken to go to the house after we had left him, and almost succeeded in doing it. The Louisiana's said they picked him up when they found him, as they were making the charge and laid him in the house. After the charge, as they fell back, they took him with them and buried him. One of Lafferty's greatest faults was to want to always be doing something daring; something that no one else would try to do. Had he been more cautious he might not have been killed and yet have accomplished as much good as one so daring and reckless.,

72. *ROBERT LINN, wounded at Murfreesboro, Tenn. December 31,1862, furloughed. He came west of the Mississippi River, and when well re-entered the army over here.
73. N.H. MAXWELL, Killed at Nashville, Tenn, December 15,1864. He was a step-brother to orderly Sergeant, H.B. Cornelius, who was killed at Franklin.
74. BENJAMIN MENASCO, died some time in October,1861, in Missouri.
75. T.J. McCRAY, was detached duty, as one of the Whitsworth Sharpshooters for nearly two years during the latter part of the war. He was wounded at Kennesaw Mountainm June 27,1864 and at Franklin, Tenn. November 30,1864, after which he was furloughed. He is living at this time on his farm, three miles southwest from Dardanelle.
76. T.B. McCLURE, killed at Atlanta,Ga., July 28,1864, while carrying the colors of the regiment. He and I were the two boys whom Captain Daniels rejected when the company was first made. When we offered to join the company he says, "Boys I would like to take you along, But I can't. I don't want boys in my company. I want men with beard on their faces; men who will stick, through thick and thin, for twelve months." But future events proved how erroneous was the idea that beardless boys would not make good soldiers, and today, were I going to raise a company of volunteers, and had my choice in selecting, I would take good, healthy young men and boys, from 16 to 25 years of age, and all single. Another thing that was proven during the war and might be mentioned here, is that small men, as a rule, stood marching and other hardships better than the larger ones.
77. WILEY J. MEYERS, wounded at Chickamauga, Ga. September 20,1863, and at Resaca, Ga., May 14, 1864, and furloughed. He has died since the war at his home in Ward township, this county.
78. WILLIAM MEYERS, discharged in Kentucky, October,1862, being under age, After coming home he joined the Federal army.
79. MILES MOSS, left the company January 10, 1864, and started home. He was captured on the way and carried north, where he joined the Federal Navy to keep out of prison.
80. JOHN MILLS, discharged in 1861, came home and was elected captain. The company joined Colonel Lemoyne's regiment, which was organized at that time at Dardanelle.
81. J.M. McCLENDON, left in Arkansas with horses. April 1862, and dropped from roll at re-organization, on account of being over conscript age. Died some time in 1882 at his home in Sebastian County.
82. G.W.McLENDON, left January 10,1864. Has died since the war in Sebastian County.
83. L.G. McLENDON, wounded at Chickamauga, Ga. September 20,1863. Left the company January 10,1864. He is living at the present time in Sebastian County.
84. JAMES K. NETTLES, absent most of the time on surgeon's certificate. Was absent at the time of surrender. Went to Texas after the war. Died at Hot Springs, Ark., date unknown.
85. WILLIAM NEAL, died some time in April 1862. He was related to the Neal family, who has lived so long in this county, near Chichalah.
86. WILLIAM OXFORD, died in Kentucky in 1862. Don't know where he was from.
87. PHILLIP OTTENHEIMER, captured in Kentucky in 1862 and was paroled. Was wounded at Oak Hills, Mo., August 19,1861.

88. *ABE OTTENHEIMER, captured with Phillip in Kentucky and paroled. They both with back to Memphis and went into business. They are doing business at present in Little Rock.
89. R.P. PARKS, was elected third Lieutenant to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Samuel Cravens, December 1861. This position he held until the re-organization, may 1862. He was than elected captain and served as such until the close of the war. He commanded the regiment all through Hood's campaign in the winter of 1864, in Tennessee. He was one of the captains of the regiment who was always at his post and never shrank from what he conceived to be his duty, either in camps or on the battle field. He was wounded at Murfreesboro, Tenn. At Chickamauga,Ga., and on Lick Skillet Road, July 28,1864, during the seige of Atlanta. He died some time in 1883 at his home at Gravelly Hill. He was absent at time of surrender on leave of absence.
90. * J.S.PARKS, was marked on the roll deserted, and while that was true in one sense, yet it could not be called deserting. It occurred in this way; In the early part of the winter of 1863-4, while we were in winter quarters at Meridian, Miss. We got news from home, stating the terrible outrages that were being committed by the bushwhackers. J.S. Parks' family was right in the midst of the country where the worst of this was going on and no chance to get out, and he believing, as every other reasonable man does, that the next duty after that to God, is to take care of his wife and children. Naturally felt that he ought to go to them, and the rest of us wanting to send word by him, he went to work, to secure him a furlough. At that time there were no furloughs given to come further west than our lines extended, so there was no use trying through the legal channels. We got hold of a blank furlough filled it out, and then Henry Cornelius, I think it was signed Captain Parks name, I signed General Reynolds' name. John Haney General Walthall's and Tom McCray, General Polk's, With this he had no trouble in passing our line. He came home, got his family out, then joined Daniels Company and served in it until the close of the war. So I do not consider that he did more than many others, at least, would have done under similar circumstances.
91. THOMAS Parks died sometime in April 1863. He is that stepped of sixty yards and offered to let Dave Youngblood shoot at him all day with a little parlor seven shooter, one day while in winter quarters at Sparda. Youngblood fired three shots, the first two missing, but the third took effect in jis hip, ranged back and buried itself four or five inches in the flesh. If it had been a few inches higher, so as to have passed over the illium, it might have proved a serious thing, but as it was it only gave Parks a sixty days' furlough.
92. J.K. PERRY, wounded at Jackson, Miss, during the seige of that place. Being disable from further active service, he was given an indefinite furlough. He went to Texas, and after recovering sufficiently from his wound to be able to ride, was assigned to duty in the quartermaster's department of the Trans-Mississippi, where he served until the surrender. He is at present in the mercantile business in Dardanelle.
93. H.R. POOL, Was wounded at Chickamauga and at Kennesaw Mountain, and was killed at Nashville, Tenn. December 15, 1864. Rather a singular coincidence connected with his first two wounds, is that at Chickamauga, while marching by the right flank he was cut across the small of his back with a twelve-pound shell before it had struck the ground, bruising him badly and making a severe wound. And at Kennesaw Mountain, a shell burst so near his head that the blood ran from his nose and ears both. Both these wounds were severe wounds, both from shells, and yet the skin was not torn in either.
94. O.W.PATTY, Left the company at Meridian Miss. January 10, 1864, without leave, but came to this side of the river and joined Hill's regiment. Was killed in the spring of 1865 by bushwhackers, near Baty's Mill.
95. GEORGE ROBINSON, Left the company at Meridian, Miss. January 10,1864. Without leave, but came to this side of the river and joined Hill's Regiment and served until the surrender. He has died since the war in Carden's Bottom.
96. PAT RUSH, Missing at the battle of Oak Hills, Mo. August 10, 1861. T.J. McCray saw him after we went east of the Mississippi river, with a company from Mississippi. He came to this state from Mississippi just before the war.
97. *B.F. SWILLING, wounded at Murfreesboro, Tenn., December 31,1862. Left Company some time in the spring of 1865, after coming out of Tennessee.
98. W.H. SWILLING, killed at Murfreesboro, Tenn., December 31, 1962. He was a brother to Frank Swilling.
99. M.V. SHOCKLEY, died some time in August, 1862
100. R.S Spinks, missing at the battle of Oak Hills, Mo. August 10, 1861, and never heard from since.

101. JOHN SPENCER, one of the seven at the surrender. Living at present in North carolina.
102. MATTHEW SLOAN, I think was sent back with horses at DeVall's Bluff, on White River, in April 1862.
103. JOSEPH TILLMAN, came home some time in 1864. Is living at present in ward township, this county, on his farm. Joe was the bee hunter of the company, and when in camp for any length of time in summer, his mess had a good deal of honey to eat, if there were any bees to be found anywhere in the woods. And I think in a few instances he coursed them into somebody's yard. Be that as it may, when Joe found the bees it was no trouble to get some one to help rob the,. On the 4th of July,1863, the day Vicksburg surrendered, part of our company had a royal feast. We had moved some distance the day before, so the country around us was a little fresh, that is, it had not been much overrun by soldiers for some time. So a couple of us went out a way, from camp that morning early, and an old lady gave us a mess of roasting ears and some peaches. Joe Tillman found a sure enough bee tree in Big Black bottom near by, and some of the boys had supplied us with two nice hams from General French's larder a short time previous. It would be unnecessary to say here, for the benefit of old soldiers, that we didn't regard it as a breach of honor to take anything to eat that we found too much exposed around a commanding officer's quarters , and especially one who had made himself and staff so obnoxious, as had General French, to us. But without this explanation the young people might think this was casting reflections. If you don't understand from what I have said , boys, if you will ask some old soldier he will be able to explain to your satisfaction. There was a little incident occurred in connection with the getting of those hams, however, that I will relate here. When General French missed the hams, he ordered all the camps in the division searched. We had cleaned up our camps the day before, but had not burned all the trash yet. When Captain Parks got orders to have his company searched, he came walking down the line, asking who had General French's hams. No one denied having them, but several said they got them. Near the end of the company there were two piles of trash yet. One much larger than the other. He walked up to the larger one and kicked it over with his foot. Tom Hill says; "Captain, those hams are in that other pile there." But, thinking Tom was joking and not expecting to find the meat in the company, he turned around and went no farther. Had he kicked over a the smaller pile he would have found the Ham, sure enough , for they were covered up in it. That night they were divided between the members of the two messes. The next day we moved to Big Black, and while Pemberton was surrendering to Grant to prevent his men from starving, at Vicksburg, ham and honey, and Captain Parks, as an invited guest, of course had too much good sense to inquire too close as to where and how the vitals were procured.
104. THOMAS THOMPSON, killed at New Hope Church, Ga. On Johnston's retreat, some time in June,1864. He was brave and daring to a fault. His life was sacrificed by the want of caution on his part. We were in 150 yards of the enemy" line, both sides having strong fortifications. Each side kept little bunches of twigs stuck uo on top of their breastworks, so arranged that they could watch the other's movements, and yet protect themselves from view, and every man who exposed himself to view might expect a shot from the other side. Tommie, as we always called him, was standing up, watching from behind one of the bunches of twigs, when he saw some one out of the enemy move. He made ready to fire, at once, and perhaps half a dozen voices spoke at the same time, telling him to take his head down as soon as he fired, for all know that there would be a half dozen or a dozen shots fired at the smoke of his gun; but he waited a moment to see if he could tell whether his shot had taken effect, and that was the fatal moment, for the shots were fired, as all expected they would be, and one of them went crashing through his head, scattering his brains all around.
105. JOHN TOOMER, killed at Oak Hills, Mo. August 10,1861.
106. JOHN TAYLOR, discharged on surgeon's certificate some time during the fall of 1861.
107. C.H. UNDERWOOD, discharged at the re-organization. Over age. Was wounded afterwards and died.
108. MATTHEW WILLIAMS, was wounded at Jackson, Mississippi., July, 1863, and died afterwards from the wound.
109. T.C. WILLIAMS, transferred to General Churchill's staff, at the re0organization, May 25,1862.
110. H.H. WILLIAMS, killed at Oak Hills, Mo. August 10, 1861.
111. R.R. WILLIAMS, left company same time during the summer of 1861, after the evacuation of Atlanta, Ga. One day while on retreat, and worn out with fatigue and heat, and lying down on the side of the road resting, there came along two men belonging to a regiment of Texas Cavalry, leading a horse. They let Red ride the horse, and the ride pleased him so well he went on to camps with them, and staid with them until the surrender.

112. REUEL WILLIAMS, wounded at Resaca, Ga. May 14, 1864. One of the seven at the roll call at Jamestown, N.C. May 2,1865. Died since the war at Ola. When Reuel was wounded it seems almost like a miracle that the whole company was not wiped out of existence. We were advancing through a perfect hail storm of minnie balls and bomb shells, when a shell burst just a few feet from us, and directly in front of the company, and not more than three or four feet from the ground. When the smoke cleared away it was found that but one man had been wounded, and he not dangerously. It seemed as if, indeed, we were being cared for by Him who is able to protect as well in the storm or on the battlefield, as in our homes; where all is peace and quite.
113. I.N.WILKINSON, elected third Lieutenant at the re-organization, in 10 may, 1862. This position he held until the close of the war. He acted as inspector for General Reynolds on Hood's retreat out of Tennessee. Was absent on furlough at the time of the surrender. He was wounded in the hand at Reasca, Ga. Is living at Western Texas at present.
114. W.C. WILKINSON, wounded at Chickamauga, September 20, 1863, Was absent on furlough at time of surrender, He is living at present in Texas. Post Office, Proffett, Young County.
115. *JOHN WOOD, LEFT COMPANY January 10, 1864, He came to this side of the Mississippi River, joined Hill's regiment and served in it until the close of the war.
116. H.H. WHITE, Left the company some time in 1861, and went to the Federal army.
117. HENRY WEAVER, left behind sick when we went east of the Mississippi. River., in 1862.
118. GEORGE WAMPEE, Left behind sick at the same time Weaver was. Don't know what became of either afterwards.
119. * I.D.H. YOUNGBLOOD., transferred to a North Carolina regiment in the spring of 1864.
